Brett--Just a follow up thought on my last e-mail, with some background that may help. Our management at the Office of Administration (OA) has made clear that for OA issues that impact the White House--or, as in this case, were originally coordinated through White House Counsel--our office should coordinate with your office for legal review before the matter is brought to the agency head level. This is an excellent policy because it will provide our senior people with a coordinated legal position, as opposed to requiring that they go back and forth between different lawyers. Our Director, who is a commissioned officer, is a dual appointee who works for both the White House and OA, so it's natural to do our business this way.

It's my hope that we can make this a smooth and efficient process. I certainly understand that right now your office has a myriad of issues that need to be addressed at the beginning, and it's important that you lay the right foundation. As part of this process, it would be great if you can think about how, from your end, we can best serve our common clients, and we'll do the same over here. I would also be enthusiastic to discuss at your convenience. Adam, 5-1268

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL STAFF OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

E-mails that should be preserved locally as a record of office activities may be printed out with correspondence information (i.e. date, time, sender, recipient and subject of the message), and filed in the appropriate place. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency.

Thanks. As a follow up, I made a few changes to the second paragraph, and added a new sentence at the end.

In terms of our shop signing, do you mean that any appropriate OA or other EOP management official would be okay, or do you think that it should come from counsel?

Phil--FYI. I think we're almost there, but I'm guessing that Brett may need more time to coordinate this with his office since he has not been able to respond to this last message yet. Here's the latest draft:

I'll let you know as soon as we close the loop. In the meantime, you may want to review Brett's comments below regarding the issue of who should sign. Adam, 5-1268

Thanks. As a follow up, I made a few changes to the second paragraph, and added a new sentence at the end.

In terms of our shop signing, do you mean that any appropriate OA or other EOP management official would be okay, or do you think that it should come from counsel?

Brett--As a follow-up to my message this morning, here is a revised draft on the e-mail issue. I have also given this draft to Leanna Terrell, Associate Director for IS&T, to review to ensure technical accuracy. In case you did not receive my voice-mail, we have been given until COB today to produce a draft informing staff members of the resolution of the problem. Please call me ASAP to discuss. MEMORANDUM FOR ALL STAFF OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL STAFF OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

Thanks. Phil Larsen has received the draft and will be coordinating it with Hector Irastorza, Deputy Assistant to the President for Management and Administration. As a matter of protocol, he wants to make sure that the Counsel to the President has seen and supports this draft first. It would be great if you can confirm that Judge Gonzales concurs so Phil can move this forward. It would also be helpful if you could relate any views Judge Gonzales has on who should sign, or confirm that your views on that represent those of the Counsel. Adam, 5-1268

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

I've taken a stab at some clarifying language with a new sentence in the second paragraph. As for sending it only to those in the relevant category, my sense is that while that may be possible, it would probably take time we don't have, with a greater chance that some people may be missed. It would be great if you and Judge Gonalez can take a look and see if we're there.

Judge Gonzales has signed off, but he and I both have concerns that this memo may cause concern to those who started on January 20 and have been deleting e-mails since they started. By negative implication, the memo may be read to say that such people should have been preserving their e-mails. Is there any way to clarify -- or to send this memo by e-mail only to those who fall into the relevant category?

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL STAFF OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

I've taken a stab at some clarifying language with a new sentence in the second paragraph. As for sending it only to those in the relevant category, my sense is that while that may be possible, it would probably take time we don't have, with a greater chance that some people may be missed. It would be great if you and Judge Gonalez can take a look and see if we're there.

Judge Gonzales has signed off, but he and I both have concerns that this memo may cause concern to those who started on January 20 and have been deleting e-mails since they started. By negative implication, the memo may be read to say that such people should have been preserving their e-mails. Is there any way to clarify -- or to send this memo by e-mail only to those who fall into the relevant category?

Thanks. Phil Larsen has received the draft and will be coordinating it with Hector Irastorza, Deputy Assistant to the President for Management and Administration. As a matter of protocol, he wants to make sure that the Counsel to the President has seen and supports this draft first. It would be great if you can confirm that Judge Gonzales concurs so Phil can move this forward. It would also be helpful if you could relate any views Judge Gonzales has on who should sign, or confirm that your views on that represent those of the Counsel. Adam, 5-1268

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. I've taken a stab at some clarifying language with a new sentence in the second paragraph. As for sending it only to those in the relevant category, my sense is that while that may be possible, it would probably take time we don't have, with a greater chance that some people may be missed. It would be great if you and Judge Gonalez can take a look and see if we're there.

Judge Gonzales has signed off, but he and I both have concerns that this memo may cause concern to those who started on January 20 and have been deleting e-mails since they started. By negative implication, the memo may be read to say that such people should have been preserving their e-mails. Is there any way to clarify -- or to send this memo by e-mail only to those who fall into the relevant category?

It would be great if you can confirm that Judge Gonzales concurs so Phil can move this forward. MEMORANDUM FOR ALL STAFF OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Staff members who began work at the EOP on or after January 20, 2001 as part of the change of administration were not affected by this problem, and were not covered by the September 29, 2000 order. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL STAFF OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Staff members who began work at the EOP on or after January 20, 2001 as part of the change of administration were not affected by this problem, and were not covered by the September 29, 2000 order. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

On September 29, 2000, all current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages which do not need to be maintained in their in or out boxes. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency.

Outstanding. I'm assuming that with the new first sentence, we can send this to all staff. Can I pass on that Judge Gonzales is square with these changes?

Can we change the date in the new sentence to on or after January 20? Some people who came on board after September 30 may have heard of the order internally (even though they were unaffected), and would need to know. However, I think this is much less likely for folks who came on with the transition. Also, is "disregard" or "ignore" better?

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

You may disregard this memorandum if you began your employment in the Executive Office of the President on or after January 20, 2001.

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Staff members who began work at the EOP on or after January 20, 2001 as part of the change of administration were not affected by this problem, and were not covered by the September 29, 2000 order. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

Adam,
Everything is correct except the last sentence in the first paragraph: "Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected. "
People who joined the staff after September 30th may have also been told by co-workers or their management, not to delete, so the sentence isn't necessarily accurate. No major problem, just clarification.
Irrespective of all this, we need to get off the dime and clear out these e-mails, for they are eating up our capacity on most of our servers!
Leanna

Phil--FYI. I think we're almost there, but I'm guessing that Brett may need more time to coordinate this with his office since he has not been able to respond to this last message yet. Here's the latest draft:

I'll let you know as soon as we close the loop. In the meantime, you may want to review Brett's comments below regarding the issue of who should sign. Adam, 5-1268

In terms of our shop signing, do you mean that any appropriate OA or other EOP management official would be okay, or do you think that it should come from counsel?

MEMORANDUM FOR ALL STAFF OF THE EXECUTIVE OFFICE OF THE PRESIDENT

FROM: _____

SUBJECT: Resolution of Technical Anomaly Affecting E-mail

You may ignore this memorandum if you began your employment in the Executive Office of the President after September 30, 2000.

On September 29, 2000, all then-current Executive Office of the President (EOP) employees were directed to refrain from deleting any e-mail message on their computers, with the exception of purely personal messages. This was due to a technical problem that affected the Automated Records Management System ("ARMS"), which captures Lotus Notes messages at the time they are sent or received (with the exception of messages that do not qualify as official records when the EOP sender designates the message as a "non-record"). Because the problem was present from approximately April 15, 2000 to September 30, 2000, staff members who began work after that period were not affected.

The problem has been resolved, and steps now have been taken to preserve messages that may have been affected by this malfunction. Accordingly, all affected users may now delete messages that do not need to be retained in their Lotus Notes account. Staff members who began work at the EOP on or after January 20, 2001 as part of the change of administration were not affected by this problem, and were not covered by the September 29, 2000 order. Any questions on your obligation to preserve records in your possession should be directed to the records management office for your office or agency. Each EOP office is responsible for maintaining appropriate records pertaining to its activities.

The below article was brought to my attention by Doug Badger, Rep. Jennifer Dunn's CoS. They are in the process of negotiating with Sens. Murray and Cantwell over the number of GOPers and Dems on their bipartisan judicial selection nominating commission.

In The Northwest: For our state's sake, bipartisanship must be more than another D.C. promise

Friday, February 23, 2001

By JOEL CONNELLY
SEATTLE POST-INTELLIGENCER COLUMNIST

Democratic Sen. Patty Murray and Republican Rep. Jennifer Dunn flashed glad-to-see-you politicians' smiles while briefly greeting each other at a Seattle Art Museum reception this week.

They were, as usual, going in opposite directions: Murray was on her way in to speak and be lionized by Seattle-area conservationists. Dunn was making a cameo appearance.

Behind the scenes, however, teeth are clenched as aides to Murray and Dunn try to negotiate a significant question of turf. Will the state's two senators, both Democrats, play the same role in picking the state's federal judges under George W. Bush that Republican Sen. Slade Gorton did with Bill Clinton in the White House?

The judicial skirmishing is worthy of notice. By working together, Murray and Gorton sent the White House quality nominees for vacancies on the federal bench. Once Clinton made the formal pick, the Senate confirmed our state's judges while nominations elsewhere languished.

Barring agreement, Murray and Sen. Maria Cantwell could indefinitely hold up confirmation of judicial nominees. It is exactly what Gorton did with two of Clinton's nominations until White House Counsel Charles Ruff dealt Gorton into the selection process.

Murray and Cantwell made the point with steely grace in a letter they sent to Bush last week: "Establishing such a process will be critical to moving Washington state judicial nominations through the Senate in a timely, efficient manner."

Still, there are wider and more important questions than whether Murray and Cantwell will put members on the committee screening candidates to replace retiring Tacoma-based U.S. District Judge Robert Bryan. The Democratic senators are testing whether Bush's promise of bipartisanship is real, as well as the extent to which Dunn is willing to ease up on the share-no-power style with which Republicans have run the House.

Washington voters have shifting partisan allegiances, but Washington state has permanent interests. Until the early 1990s, the Evergreen State's congressional delegation offered a model of how cross-aisle cooperation can give king-sized clout to a medium-sized state.

"He (or she) is a team player!" is the kindest compliment bestowed by Rep. Norm Dicks, D-Wash., on any colleague. The burly Dicks is a former Husky lineman and a House member since 1976, and he once served on the legendary staff of the late Sen. Warren Magnuson.

As Richard Nixon aptly demonstrated, pigskin metaphors are a clumsy way of speaking about life. But the state's lawmakers used to execute plays very much like a disciplined, well-coordinated football or basketball team.

When the Reagan administration tried to ax Export-Import Bank loans, used to finance Boeing jet sales abroad, Democratic Rep. Mike Lowry worked on liberals leery of "corporate welfare" while GOP Rep. Sid Morrison gently twisted arms of conservatives who believed that government was part of the problem. The bank was not broken.

Magnuson used an obscure bill called the Marine Mammal Protection Act to attach a "little amendment" that banned supertankers from Puget Sound. It sailed through the Senate without drawing the attention of Gov. Dixy Lee Ray, who was campaigning for an oil port and pipeline terminus at Cherry Point near Ferndale. But sponsors feared a big public stink in the House, if Republican watchdog Rep. Bob Bauman of Maryland found out that the legislation was mixing supertankers with seals and sea lions.

GOP Rep. Joel Pritchard of Washington was sent on a quiet mission to Bauman, and prevailed on the watchdog not to growl. The legislation was a done deal by the time Dixy found out and called Maggie "a dictator."

"There is a tradition in this delegation that we work together on state issues," noted newly elected Democratic Rep. Rick Larsen, who is committed to the old style of cooperation. Larsen inherited a prize given the delegation's junior member, a garish painting of a baby chick newly hatched from its egg.

In recent years, however, team play has often seemed as uncommon in the Washington delegation as on the Los Angeles Lakers.

The delegation has been invaded by limelight lovers such as former Republican Rep. Linda Smith. Cases of active dislike have popped up. Liberal Democratic Rep. Jim McDermott once confessed that he dreaded monthly delegation breakfasts because it aroused his secret desire to pop Slade Gorton in the nose. GOP Rep. Doc Hastings uncorked an unusually personal attack on Murray last year after she successfully lobbied Clinton to create the Hanford Reach National Monument along the Columbia River.

Most of all, however, partisan acrimony has swept the House in recent years. Despite the Bush administration's claimed commitment to bipartisanship, Republicans continue to exercise absolute rule over Congress' lower chamber -- despite the fact that House membership is almost evenly divided.

"I think a lot of us want to work with the new administration, but there is a well-established record of abuse by the partisan Republicans who run the majority," said Rep. Ellen Tauscher, D-Calif., an organizer of the new bipartisan House Centrist Coalition.

The key actors on cooperation, Dunn and Murray, are the yin and yang of the Washington delegation.

Dunn has enjoyed a charmed political life. She has received uncritical news coverage, from Dick Larsen columns in The Seattle Times when she was Republican chairwoman to front-page articles on potential Bush Cabinet jobs she did not get. She has the public image of a moderate, while being an important player in the hard-line House of Newt Gingrich, Dick Armey and Tom DeLay.

Murray is a frequently underestimated workhorse. She has been sneered at by rightist KVI commentators and leftish Seattle Weekly columnists. Still, she is chairwoman of the Democratic Senate Campaign Committee, was instrumental in creating a national monument, and scored the biggest Senate re-election victory since Henry Jackson graced the ballot.

Murray has reached out to W., calling Bush soon after his election victory became final. The two talked about how they could cooperate across party lines on education policy. If there is to be a new spirit of cooperation in Washington, D.C., much impetus will have to come from Dunn: She is a hard partisan, but is also Bush's chief political presence in the state.

A renewed spirit of cooperation in the Washington state delegation is a necessity. Just look at our low-cost federal power system, and our kilowatt-squeezed neighbors.

"We can tell you a number of people in California will see the flow of the Columbia River as the answer to their prayers," Seattle City Light boss Gary Zarker recently told the Cascadia Mayors Conference.

Enough said.

First, I will assume you are talking only about political fundraisers. Ms. Smith would have to be sensitive to limitations on fundraising imposed by the Hatch Act; so, she would not be able to solicit or receive contributions. She would be able to attend fundraisers for her spouse, stand in the receiving line, sit at the head table, and urge others to vote for her spouse. Doing things like selling or collect money for tickets to a fundraiser would be prohibited. She could appear in political advertsements . . . but no personal solitications for funds are allowed.

Moose,

I am in the process of interviewing candidates for the White House Intern Coordinator position. One of the candidates is MaryJo Smith, wife of Senator Bob Smith. I am seeking your advice on whether there would be any ethics issues if were in fact hired for this position. Senator Smith is up in 2002, therefore there would be a fair amount of fundraising events that she would be presumably obligated to attend.

What are your thoughts on this issue?

Brett,
No, I think that is the correct approach and NSC and PFIAB should be subject to the WH memo. Our NSC Senior Director of Records and I did, however, review your draft with our current procedures and have a few comments if you're still open to receiving our views.
We would like to refer to your memo in our guidance to the NSC staff and add directions applicable to our unique circumstances (e.g., a that are not different than the unclassified White House system.)

I will email our suggestions within a few minutes for your

There is a dinner on March 17 for a large group known as the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick. It is an annual dinner of several hundred to celebrate St. Patrick's Day and has guest speakers each year (Justices Scalia and Kennedy in the past few years). No problem so far, but dinner is all-male. What is the appropriateness of attending this event given that fact?

Brett,
Thanks for the update.
Bill Leary, our Senior Director for Records Management, has rewritten our draft guidance to NSC staff to reflect the final guidance for WHouse staff as explained in your memo. We still need separate guidance because our classified email system requires our staff to make a decison not only as to classification (UNCLASS, CONFIDENTIAL, SECRET, TOP SECRET) but also whether it is a record or not. We will include a copy of your memo as an attachment to our memo.
Please note the last paragraph on preserving calendars we keep on our classified computer system, which are shared within directorates and in some cases within the NSC at large in the course of conducting official NSC business. This practice would seem to justifiy our preserving these as records, which has been our practice in the past.
I am bringing down a copy of our original memo with lineouts and a copy of our most recent proposal for your concurrence.
Thank you. Jock

Brett,
With all the memos firing out of Counsel's office last week I'm not sure you could have had time to look at our draft records memo I dropped off.
When you do get a minute to read our latest draft could you please drop me an email and I'll then call to discuss?
Thank you. Jock

You asked whether you can use the RNC computer in your White House office to devise a schedule of political fundraisers that should be attended by the President, Vice President, and cabinet secretaries. The answer is yes. You may not solicit, receive, or accept funds while on government property. However, you are fully authorized to otherwise engage in political activities while on government property and while using government equipment so long as the government is reimbursed for any additional costs incurred while engaging in such activity. You may therefore devise schedules for political fundraising events on your RNC computer in your White House office.

As Rachel notes, Bob Dole leads the commission that supports the memorial. Notwithstanding his recent commercials, Bob Dole is an American hero, and memorials to veterans sure seem like a good patriotic idea. I thus guess I would be surprised if President Bush wanted to oppose Bob Dole on an apple-pie issue like this. (Not that we will be in the loop, but my 2 cents.)

Following up on Addington's caution about White House involvement on the WWII Memorial, I want to add that, perhaps contrary to what you may think, many WWII veterans are opposed to having the Memorial on the Mall. Further reason to tread lightly.

Accordingly, any records management issues regarding these faxes should be referred to White House Records Management (Terry Good), who then would coordinate any decision with White House Counsel. Subject: ARMS Requirements for Fax Server

Kate,

The Mail Analysis (MA) of the Presidential Correspondence Office uses two facsimiles to receive faxes addressed to the President. These two facsimiles run around the clock and generate lots of paper (and burn trees too). MA likes to install a Fax Server that will allow them to receive faxes electronically. All incoming faxes will be saved as images and can be printed on demand. The question is: does the Fax Server meet the ARMS requirements? If not, what should we do to make the Fax Server ARMS compliant?

Thanks,
Matthew Yin

Article below on Sen. Bond's attempt to steal the IA seat and Sen. Grassley's contacts with WH re 8th Cir. seat.
Iowa, two other states in fight for judge seats
By JANE NORMAN
Register Washington Bureau
03/08/2001

Washington, D.C. - Missouri, Iowa and Arkansas could be in for a war between the states over which will lay claim to two prized vacant seats on the federal bench.
Sen. Christopher "Kit" Bond, R-Mo., has notified the White House that he thinks Missouri should have a third judge on the Eighth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, based in St. Louis.
There are 11 active seats on the court, which covers seven states, including Iowa. Two seats are now vacant - one that was occupied by George Fagg of Des Moines and another left open by a judge from Nebraska.
A third seat is expected to be vacated when an Arkansas judge retires next month, according to the St. Louis Post-Dispatch.
Each state gets to have at least one seat on the court, and Iowa and Arkansas already have one each. Iowa's judge is David R. Hansen of Cedar Rapids.
"Until 1994, Missouri did have three seats on the Eighth Circuit Court - a recognition that Missouri accounts for one-third of the caseload," Bond said. "We are merely asking for a fair return to the status quo."

The Iowa seat sparked fireworks in the Senate last year when President Clinton nominated former Iowa Attorney General Bonnie Campbell to fill it. Campbell's nod resulted in protests from Christian conservatives, and Republicans who control the Senate did not bring her up for a vote despite loud protests from Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Ia.
Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Ia., has been in the process of coming up with the names of three new candidates for the position to submit to the White House some time in the next few days.
Grassley said Wednesday that as a member of the Senate Judiciary Committee he would block any attempt by Bond to acquire the Iowa seat.
"I would object to this," he said. "I don't know of any state that has had a seat taken away from them."
Grassley said he has had many conversations with the Bush administration about the vacancy on the appeals court and there was no mention of Bond's request. He said he is not at all concerned that Bond might succeed.
White House officials could not be reached for comment.
Bond and Grassley would carry weight with the administration as Republican senators. Arkansas also has one Republican senator.
Harkin pointed out that Campbell's nomination technically is still pending because Clinton re-nominated her before leaving office in January along with a host of other contested judges.
"President Bush would have to withdraw her nomination to nominate another person for the slot," Harkin said. "It was wrong for the Republicans to hold up her nomination last fall, and it would be wrong for the president to take this course of action."

Please find attached the latest "By the Numbers," which shows President Bush,s Gallup job approval today is higher than Presidents Clinton, Bush 41 and Reagan at comparable points in their administrations.

As always, I would appreciate it if you would pass this on to the appropriate members of your respective offices. Hard copies were distributed to Senior Staff. Thank you.

I will recuse myself on three additional matters/issues:

(i) Judicial Watch suits against the government, including document requests to the Archives arising out of those matters;
(ii) the federal grand jury investigation of Bill Clinton and others in New York, including document requests to the Archives arising out of that matter; and
(iii) matters involving the cosmetics industry (I will seek the such matters).

The following story is from the American Spectator.

"Fast Track

"One reason White House counsel Alberto Gonzales is moving so quickly to cut off the American Bar Association from review of Bush judicial nominees is White House concern that Bush will need to make at least two Supreme Court appointments in the next six months. "It could be as many as three," says a White House source.

"Within the past month, Gonzales and aides from the White House Counsel's Office have met with Republican Senate leaders and asked them to vet a list of about 25 names of potential nominees to the high court.

"One name surprisingly missing was that of Sen. Orrin Hatch. 'I wouldn't read anything into that,' the source added.
'We know where the Senate would come down on that one. It's the other names we're curious about.'"

I'm told that Iowa picked up a second seat in 1991 based on P.L. 101-650.
I don't know whether that law requires a seat in Iowa. Also, Missouri lost its third seat when a Missouri vacancy was filled with a Minnesota judge in 1994.

If there are vacancies in your district court states, you should reach out to the relevant person (senior Republican Senator or, if none, check with Brad or me on contact) to tell them we are open for business and happy to receive names.

MEMORANDUM FOR ALBERTO R. GONZALES

FROM: BRETT M. KAVANAUGH

SUBJECT: Payment for Travel on Military Aircraft

I recommend that we follow the following policies (which are consistent with past practice) for travel on military aircraft, assuming that the Office of Administration and the White House Military Office agree with these policies.

Guests on Air Force One for Trips Other than Political Trips

Individuals who travel on Air Force One or Air Force Two at the invitation of the President or Vice President travel as official guests of the President or Vice President and need not reimburse (unless the trip is a political trip).

Costs for Political Travel

For those who travel with the President or Vice President for the purpose of attending political activities or events, the RNC or other entity must reimburse for the individual's travel at the full commercial economy class rate, plus tax, plus one dollar. Government officers or employees who travel with the President or Vice President on political trips are on official duty so long as they do not engage in political activity and are traveling with the President or Vice President for an official purpose related to government business.

Helicopter Transportation

Use of DOD helicopters by the President or Vice President is considered an official security measure and, therefore, not reimbursable. When the trip is political and the helicopter is the sole source of transportation, the RNC or other entity will reimburse for the costs associated with the helicopter travel.

Travel with the First Lady on Military Aircraft

If the First Lady is travelling on official business, no reimbursement is required for her or any employees or guests traveling with her. If the First Lady is traveling on personal business, the First Lady and her guests must reimburse at the full commercial economy class rate, plus tax, plus one dollar. If the First Lady is travelling for a political purpose, the RNC or other entity must reimburse at the full commercial economy class rate, plus tax, plus one dollar.

I definitely tried to make it clearer so people can understand it. I also emphasized that we need to run this by OA and WHMO to make sure they are ok given various ambiguities in past memos.

As to your questions, the government officer sentence was designed to capture the actual rule in a single clear sentence and to be consistent with the 1982 OLC opinion that generally governs this topic. That sentence would cover the officials listed in the Bush 1 memo, who are also discussed in the OLC opinions on the topic. Perhaps listing the officials is helpful, but the list can be underinclusive and overinclusive, in my view, depending on the nature of the trip. Also, I do not see a strong basis in the OLC opinions for simply declaring OPA folks to be on political activity at all times. (Also, note that there is, in fact, an OPA in this White House as well; I am on their speed dial.) If Karl Rove or Ken Mehlmann travels with the President to Maine today to prepare him for the speech, that is official not political.

As the memo says, First Lady's guests do not have to reimburse if she is traveling on official business.

A further thought: Your summary of the policy seems like a simplified version of past policies -- and I think simplification is a good thing, in this context. But I can't tell if your recommendations are a slight modification of past practices or simply a pared down restatement.

For example, the past policy memos list certain individuals (e.g., Chief of Staff, Doctor, NSA) who "are considered official passengers regardless of the nature of the trip (i.e., official or political)"; but your memo doesn't explicitly take that position. Is this a change in policy that you recommend? Or is it not a change in practice because past Administrations did not, in fact, adhere to the policies announced in the memos? Also, under the policy memo from the former Administration, all staff from the Office of Political Affairs were always considered to be travelling politically, even if the trip were mixed political/official. Was the Office of Political Affairs equivalent to our Strategic Initiatives? And do you recommend adhering to such a policy?

Also what happens if the First Lady is travelling on official business, but her guests (e.g., her daughters) are not accompanying her for any official purpose? Do the guests have to reimburse? The past policy memos are ambiguous on this question -- at one point suggesting that, to be official, the guests/family members must be "assist[ing] in carrying out official functions," but at another point not.

STATEMENT
By Dr. Lewis J. Bellardo
Deputy Archivist of the United States
National Archives and Records Administration
Washington, DC

To the
Subcommittee on Government Efficiency, Financial Management and Intergovernmental Relations
Of the Committee on Government Reform
House of Representatives
Congress of the United States

April 5, 2001

Mr. Chairman, I want to begin by thanking you for holding this hearing on H.R. 577. As the Deputy Archivist of the United States and former Acting Director of the Office of Presidential Libraries of the National Archives, I am delighted to be able to join you this morning to offer some background on the Libraries system and what we think are its multiple benefits to scholarship, public policy, education, and a more complete understanding of our democracy. As I think the Chairman knows, this has been a most successful public-private partnership and we greatly appreciate the opportunity to explain why it has succeeded for 60 years and 11 presidential administrations and how the system works.

When you invite an archivist to testify, we must start with a little history.

REV_00175146

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE PRESIDENTIAL LIBRARY SYSTEM

Sixty years ago Franklin D. Roosevelt proposed creating a Presidential Library that would be a part of an institution whose growth he had shepherded – the National Archives. Roosevelt suggested a novel and innovative approach – he would donate the land and build the library with private funding and then give the library and his papers to the National Archives. On June 30, 1941, as the war in Europe threatened democracy, Roosevelt dedicated his library at Hyde Park. His words of dedication remain important today.

> To bring together the records of the past and to house them in buildings where they will be preserved for the use of men and women in the future, a Nation must believe in three things.
> It must believe in the past.
>
> It must believe in the future.
> It must, above all, believe in the capacity of its own people so to learn from the past that they can gain judgement in creating their own future.

In the services it provided for its researchers, its extensive collection of Roosevelt materials, and the incorporation of a museum experience for hundreds of thousands of visitors a year, the Roosevelt Library became the model for the presidential library system, which soon began to grow.

President Truman, deploring the loss of presidential papers in the past, stated "such destruction should never again be permitted…because the truth behind a President's actions can be found only in his official papers, and every Presidential paper is official." Originally, Truman considered depositing his papers at the National Archives, in Washington, DC, but by 1950, he decided on a presidential library in his hometown of Independence, Missouri. Truman strongly felt that presidential libraries were not to be monuments to a president but centers for the study of the presidency. The Truman Institute, established to build and support the library, has a long history of sponsoring intellectual exchanges through conferences and the Truman Grants program for the study of the presidency.

Dwight D. Eisenhower's clear support of the development of a library at the site of the already established Eisenhower Museum in Abilene, Kansas prompted Congress to pass The Presidential Libraries Act of 1955 (44 U.S.C. 2108). The legislation had full bipartisan support and was hailed by scholars and educators. This Act provided continuing legal authority for the government to accept the gift of a Presidential Library.

President Hoover had originally given his papers to Stanford, but responded favorably to a request of a citizens committee from his hometown for the development of a library in West Branch, IA. His library became the third added to the system in 1962. The Eisenhower Library was also opened in 1962 and a pattern, which has remained unbroken, was established.

Over time, however, the venue for a Presidential Library shifted from the President's hometown, to larger metropolitan areas or a university campus. This often means three and even four way partnerships, as the library foundation, the university, and the local community come together to build a presidential center. The Presidential Libraries Act of 1955 presciently enabled this by authorizing the government to enter into agreements with any State or political subdivision, universities and institutions of higher learning, institute or foundation for the purposes of utilizing land, buildings, and equipment for a Presidential Archival Depository. The John F. Kennedy Library is adjacent to the University of Massachusetts; the Lyndon B. Johnson Library and Museum is on the University of Texas at Austin campus; the Gerald Ford Library is at the University of Michigan; the Jimmy Carter Library is on the campus of Emory University; the George Bush Library is part of Texas A & M University; and the William Jefferson Clinton Library will be affiliated with the University of Arkansas at Little Rock.

In 1986 Congress passed various amendments to the previous Act to reduce the costs of operating Presidential libraries. 44 U.S.C. 2112 requires that an endowment equal to 20% of the cost of the building be transferred to the government at the time the Library is turned over to the government. Libraries larger than 70,000 sq. ft. are to be accompanied by an endowment that increases geometrically in accordance with the size of the building. The Act also required the Archivist to promulgate architectural and design standards for the preservation of materials and the inclusion of adequate research facilities. The Bush Library is the first Library required to have an endowment. On the day the Bush Library was dedicated, the Bush Foundation presented a check for $4 million to the National Archives Trust Fund. A serious concern faced by those planning new libraries is the failure of the new Act to distinguish the differences in archival storage requirements for a one-term versus a two-term President.

The 1986 Act did not change the requirement that the Archivist submit a written report to Congress prior to accepting a library but it did set forth the specific information required in the report. The Archivist may not accept the Library until the expiration of a period of 60 days of continuous session of Congress beginning on the day the Archivist transmits the report. The report must include:

- A description of the proposed gift.

REV_00175149

- A statement specifying the total cost and the amount to be deposited in an endowment.
- A general description of any papers, documents, or historical materials proposed to be deposited in the library.
- An estimate of the increase in the total annual cost to the United States of maintaining, operating, and protecting the depository.
- A certification that the depository and the equipment therein will, comply with the standards promulgated by the archivist.

PRESIDENTIAL MATERIALS

Throughout the 18th, 19th, and well into the 20th century, no one questioned the private ownership of Presidential papers by the President. Former Presidents could donate them to a library or archives, or not, as they saw fit. Fortunately, many presidential papers were donated and are available for historical research today. On the other hand, many were accidentally or purposely destroyed. Biographers of George Washington snipped out pages of Washington's diaries. Chester Arthur burned his papers. Former Presidents and their families exercised considerable discretion in what they donated resulting in selective donation and selective destruction. One very powerful reason the National Archives wanted libraries built and given to the National Archives was that this donation of a library meant the National Archives would also receive the President's papers. In its time this system of donation worked very well. While there was nothing mandatory in the legislation for presidential libraries requiring that presidents systematically preserve their presidential papers, the legislation assured a president who donated his materials to the National Archives that the integrity of his papers would be preserved. The papers would be cared for by a professional archival staff and made available to all as historical records.

REV_00175150

The handling of presidential materials began to change again with President Nixon's resignation in 1974. Congress enacted the Presidential Recordings and Materials Preservation Act (PRMPA) to ensure that no evidence in President Nixon's papers, tapes, or other historical material relating to Watergate would be destroyed. The PRMPA seized the Nixon presidential materials and gave the National Archives and Records Service, now NARA, legal custody and control over them.

Historians, journalists, and Congress now raised serious questions about the ownership of Presidential materials suggesting instead they be treated as government records. PRMPA had established the National Study Commission on Records and Documents of Federal Officials to explore topics of ownership, control, disposition, and preservation of historic materials. The report of the Commission, completed in March 1977, made two basic recommendations:

1. All documentary materials received or made by Federal Officials in discharge of their official duties should be considered the property of the United States.
2. Federal Officials should be given the prerogative to control access to their materials up to 15 years after the end of their federal service.

In 1978, Congress acted on the report and passed the Presidential Records Act (44 U.S.C. chapter 22). This Act created and defined a new category of records – Presidential records and established the terms of access to these records. The Act clearly established that these records are owned by the United States. After conclusion of a president's tenure, the custody of presidential records is transferred to the Archivist of the United States.

Government archivists and curators preserve, process, and provide access to the presidential materials in their care. The process for providing access to donated historical materials and the process for providing access to presidential records vary somewhat in implementation because of the statutory and regulatory requirements. However, the mission of the government staff in each

Library is the same – to preserve and process the materials and provide access as fully and promptly as the law or deed and resources permit.

Besides large collections of papers and records of the President and others associated with him, each presidential library also houses various artifacts and gifts given to the President. The latter include Head of State gifts under The Foreign Gifts and Decorations Act, 22 U.S.C. 264, and gifts received by the President from private citizens and accepted by him for eventual deposit in his presidential library (44 U.S.C. 2111 and 2112).

Many historians, educators, and other users have offered their testimonials on the value of presidential libraries and the dedicated staff that preserve, process, and assist them in using the materials. Countless forwards to well-known historical works over the past fifty years refer to the importance of these materials for exploring and understanding historical themes and issues of our time. In a recent Washington Times article (2/28/00), the reporter noted that "As far as scholars, educators and the U.S. government are concerned, the libraries are among the most important research sites in the United States." In the same article, Page Miller, former director of the National Coordinating Committee for the Promotion of History, is quoted saying, "All you have to do is check the footnotes of major prize-winning books and monographs dealing with presidents and you'll see they all reference presidential libraries." Anna Nelson, a long-time user of archives, has found that "in all these presidential libraries the archivists are splendid," a view widely shared by professionals who use the libraries.

The materials in presidential libraries are among this Nation's most important documents. Presidential records are often open for research long before the records of other departments and agencies of government are even transferred to the National Archives. Political scientists study the processes used by Presidents to govern and make recommendations to new Presidents on what works and does not work. Economists study the impact of presidential decisions on economic indicators and project what will happen in the future. The media searches for examples from our past to inform the public about current events. Hundreds of thousands of children visit libraries each year to learn about how President's make decisions, how laws are passed, how wars were fought, how our civil rights have been ensured, and how people lived before they were born. And over a million visitors each year view the human drama of the presidency through the power of objects and documents displayed in the libraries.

PRESIDENTIAL LIBRARY FOUNDATIONS

Presidents have a vision for their libraries that goes beyond building a bricks and mortar building and caring for their records. This may be providing a premier institution to support educational institutions at all levels or promoting public service or providing forums for the exploration of the important issues of our day. Whatever their larger vision has been, former Presidents and their families know that a lively, exciting institution that draws a large visitorship from their community and from the nation, and an institution that provides an informative program of exhibits, public, and educational events must have an active and generous foundation. The government cannot be expected to provide appropriated funds to each presidential library for these purposes. The library foundations have evolved to meet these needs. The contributions of these support organizations to the libraries spells the difference between static repositories and lively, vital centers of scholarship and service to the public.

In 1973, James B. Rhoads, then Archivist of the United States, told an education symposium at the Lyndon Baines Johnson Library, "Presidential libraries would be fulfilling their purpose if they did nothing more than preserve and provide access to the papers they contain...but their charters are broad and their possibilities for service are unlimited." However broad their charters may be, the libraries face limitations imposed by financial reality. Taxpayers are under no obligation to fund a temporary exhibit on the Civil War, a conference on civil rights, or educational efforts aimed at high school students, admirable and useful as these undeniably are to the public. These efforts are funded by the libraries' support organizations and can constitute as much as one-third of the support in those libraries with highly active public and outreach programs.

Directly appropriated funds pay for activities mandated by law as part of NARA's mission. These include appraisal, accessioning, processing, and preserving of materials held in the libraries, as well as the promotion of their usage by researchers. NARA must also provide for security, facility maintenance, and environmental and safety controls. NARA pays salaries for administrators, archivists, archives specialists, curators, registrars, librarians, facility managers, education specialists, technicians, and clerks. The Trust Fund of each library provides admission clerks, exhibit specialists, audiovisual specialists, visitor services staff, and volunteer coordinators. Foundations in many of the libraries provide additional staff to support educational activities and Internet accesses.

As existing buildings became cramped and obsolete, many Foundations have supported efforts to update and expand Library buildings by providing funds for expanding exhibit and educational programs. Public funds to expand spaces in libraries have often been contingent on the ability of the foundations to raise additional private funds to support the program functions in these expanded spaces.

In summary, the libraries and their support organizations have demonstrated a commitment to public service and have displayed an entrepreneurial willingness to rely upon financial sources other than the American taxpayer.

Mr. Chairman, that concludes my prepared remarks. I would be happy to answer any questions at the appropriate time.

You asked about weekly reports that cover hot issues in the states, a redistricting update, grassroots activity on behalf of the President's program, and the 2002 election (candidate recruitment, polls, and other developments). These four issues are all appropriate for weekly reports, although you should divide them into 2 reports: (1) an official report related to activity in support of the President's legislative program; and (2) a political report related to redistricting and other activity for the upcoming elections. Your directors would prepare them accordingly on the appropriate equipment. Sorry for the inconvenience, but that would be the best way to do this to avoid any questions at all.

STATEMENT
By Dr. Lewis J. Bellardo
Deputy Archivist of the United States
National Archives and Records Administration
Washington, DC

To the
Subcommittee on Government Efficiency, Financial Management and Intergovernmental Relations
Of the
Committee on Government Reform
House of Representatives
Congress of the United States

April 5, 2001

Mr. Chairman, I want to begin by thanking you for holding this hearing on H.R. 577. As the Deputy Archivist of the United States and former Acting Director of the Office of Presidential Libraries of the National Archives, I am delighted to be able to join you this morning to offer some background on the Libraries system and what we think are its multiple benefits to scholarship, public policy, education, and a more complete understanding of our democracy. As I think the Chairman knows, this has been a most successful public-private partnership and we greatly appreciate the opportunity to explain why it has succeeded for 60 years and 11 presidential administrations and how the system works.

When you invite an archivist to testify, we must start with a little history.

REV_00175190

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE PRESIDENTIAL LIBRARY SYSTEM

Sixty years ago Franklin D. Roosevelt proposed creating a Presidential Library that would be a part of an institution whose growth he had shepherded – the National Archives. Roosevelt suggested a novel and innovative approach – he would donate the land and build the library with private funding and then give the library and his papers to the National Archives. On June 30, 1941, as the war in Europe threatened democracy, Roosevelt dedicated his library at Hyde Park. His words of dedication remain important today.

> To bring together the records of the past and to house them in buildings where they will be preserved for the use of men and women in the future, a Nation must believe in three things.
> It must believe in the past.
>
> It must believe in the future.
> It must, above all, believe in the capacity of its own people so to learn from the past that they can gain judgement in creating their own future.

In the services it provided for its researchers, its extensive collection of Roosevelt materials, and the incorporation of a museum experience for hundreds of thousands of visitors a year, the Roosevelt Library became the model for the presidential library system, which soon began to grow.

President Truman, deploring the loss of presidential papers in the past, stated "such destruction should never again be permitted…because the truth behind a President's actions can be found only in his official papers, and every Presidential paper is official." Originally, Truman considered depositing his papers at the National Archives, in Washington, DC, but by 1950, he decided on a presidential library in his hometown of Independence, Missouri. Truman strongly felt that presidential libraries were not to be monuments to a president but centers for the study of the presidency. The Truman Institute, established to build and support the library, has a long history of sponsoring intellectual exchanges through conferences and the Truman Grants program for the study of the presidency.

Dwight D. Eisenhower's clear support of the development of a library at the site of the already established Eisenhower Museum in Abilene, Kansas prompted Congress to pass The Presidential Libraries Act of 1955 (44 U.S.C. 2108). The legislation had full bipartisan support and was hailed by scholars and educators. This Act provided continuing legal authority for the government to accept the gift of a Presidential Library.

President Hoover had originally given his papers to Stanford, but responded favorably to a request of a citizens committee from his hometown for the development of a library in West Branch, IA. His library became the third added to the system in 1962. The Eisenhower Library was also opened in 1962 and a pattern, which has remained unbroken, was established.

Over time, however, the venue for a Presidential Library shifted from the President's hometown, to larger metropolitan areas or a university campus. This often means three and even four way partnerships, as the library foundation, the university, and the local community come together to build a presidential center. The Presidential Libraries Act of 1955 presciently enabled this by authorizing the government to enter into agreements with any State or political subdivision, universities and institutions of higher learning, institute or foundation for the purposes of utilizing land, buildings, and equipment for a Presidential Archival Depository. The John F. Kennedy Library is adjacent to the University of Massachusetts; the Lyndon B. Johnson Library and Museum is on the University of Texas at Austin campus; the Gerald Ford Library is at the University of Michigan; the Jimmy Carter Library is on the campus of Emory University; the George Bush Library is part of Texas A & M University; and the William Jefferson Clinton Library will be affiliated with the University of Arkansas at Little Rock.

In 1986 Congress passed various amendments to the previous Act to reduce the costs of operating Presidential libraries. 44 U.S.C. 2112 requires that an endowment equal to 20% of the cost of the building be transferred to the government at the time the Library is turned over to the government. Libraries larger than 70,000 sq. ft. are to be accompanied by an endowment that increases geometrically in accordance with the size of the building. The Act also required the Archivist to promulgate architectural and design standards for the preservation of materials and the inclusion of adequate research facilities. The Bush Library is the first Library required to have an endowment. On the day the Bush Library was dedicated, the Bush Foundation presented a check for $4 million to the National Archives Trust Fund. A serious concern faced by those planning new libraries is the failure of the new Act to distinguish the differences in archival storage requirements for a one-term versus a two-term President.

The 1986 Act did not change the requirement that the Archivist submit a written report to Congress prior to accepting a library but it did set forth the specific information required in the report. The Archivist may not accept the Library until the expiration of a period of 60 days of continuous session of Congress beginning on the day the Archivist transmits the report. The report must include:

- A description of the proposed gift.

REV_00175193

- A statement specifying the total cost and the amount to be deposited in an endowment.
- A general description of any papers, documents, or historical materials proposed to be deposited in the library.
- An estimate of the increase in the total annual cost to the United States of maintaining, operating, and protecting the depository.
- A certification that the depository and the equipment therein will, comply with the standards promulgated by the archivist.

PRESIDENTIAL MATERIALS

Throughout the 18th, 19th, and well into the 20th century, no one questioned the private ownership of Presidential papers by the President. Former Presidents could donate them to a library or archives, or not, as they saw fit. Fortunately, many presidential papers were donated and are available for historical research today. On the other hand, many were accidentally or purposely destroyed. Biographers of George Washington snipped out pages of Washington's diaries. Chester Arthur burned his papers. Former Presidents and their families exercised considerable discretion in what they donated resulting in selective donation and selective destruction. One very powerful reason the National Archives wanted libraries built and given to the National Archives was that this donation of a library meant the National Archives would also receive the President's papers. In its time this system of donation worked very well. While there was nothing mandatory in the legislation for presidential libraries requiring that presidents systematically preserve their presidential papers, the legislation assured a president who donated his materials to the National Archives that the integrity of his papers would be preserved. The papers would be cared for by a professional archival staff and made available to all as historical records.

REV_00175194

The handling of presidential materials began to change again with President Nixon's resignation in 1974. Congress enacted the Presidential Recordings and Materials Preservation Act (PRMPA) to ensure that no evidence in President Nixon's papers, tapes, or other historical material relating to Watergate would be destroyed. The PRMPA seized the Nixon presidential materials and gave the National Archives and Records Service, now NARA, legal custody and control over them.

Historians, journalists, and Congress now raised serious questions about the ownership of Presidential materials suggesting instead they be treated as government records. PRMPA had established the National Study Commission on Records and Documents of Federal Officials to explore topics of ownership, control, disposition, and preservation of historic materials. The report of the Commission, completed in March 1977, made two basic recommendations:

1. All documentary materials received or made by Federal Officials in discharge of their official duties should be considered the property of the United States.
2. Federal Officials should be given the prerogative to control access to their materials up to 15 years after the end of their federal service.

In 1978, Congress acted on the report and passed the Presidential Records Act (44 U.S.C. chapter 22). This Act created and defined a new category of records – Presidential records and established the terms of access to these records. The Act clearly established that these records are owned by the United States. After conclusion of a president's tenure, the custody of presidential records is transferred to the Archivist of the United States.

Government archivists and curators preserve, process, and provide access to the presidential materials in their care. The process for providing access to donated historical materials and the process for providing access to presidential records vary somewhat in implementation because of the statutory and regulatory requirements. However, the mission of the government staff in each

Library is the same – to preserve and process the materials and provide access as fully and promptly as the law or deed and resources permit.

Besides large collections of papers and records of the President and others associated with him, each presidential library also houses various artifacts and gifts given to the President. The latter include Head of State gifts under The Foreign Gifts and Decorations Act, 22 U.S.C. 264, and gifts received by the President from private citizens and accepted by him for eventual deposit in his presidential library (44 U.S.C. 2111 and 2112).

Many historians, educators, and other users have offered their testimonials on the value of presidential libraries and the dedicated staff that preserve, process, and assist them in using the materials. Countless forwards to well-known historical works over the past fifty years refer to the importance of these materials for exploring and understanding historical themes and issues of our time. In a recent Washington Times article (2/28/00), the reporter noted that "As far as scholars, educators and the U.S. government are concerned, the libraries are among the most important research sites in the United States." In the same article, Page Miller, former director of the National Coordinating Committee for the Promotion of History, is quoted saying, "All you have to do is check the footnotes of major prize-winning books and monographs dealing with presidents and you'll see they all reference presidential libraries." Anna Nelson, a long-time user of archives, has found that "in all these presidential libraries the archivists are splendid," a view widely shared by professionals who use the libraries.

The materials in presidential libraries are among this Nation's most important documents. Presidential records are often open for research long before the records of other departments and agencies of government are even transferred to the National Archives. Political scientists study the processes used by Presidents to govern and make recommendations to new Presidents on what works and does not work. Economists study the impact of presidential decisions on economic indicators and project what will happen in the future. The media searches for examples from our past to inform the public about current events. Hundreds of thousands of children visit libraries each year to learn about how President's make decisions, how laws are passed, how wars were fought, how our civil rights have been ensured, and how people lived before they were born. And over a million visitors each year view the human drama of the presidency through the power of objects and documents displayed in the libraries.

Brett--Thanks. FYI, I had two follow up discussions, one with Captain Miller at WHMO, and the other with Leanna Terrell. I think both agreed that it would be a good idea to narrow down what kind of technical work the WHCA personnel could do on the laptops given their knowledge of the system and resources. Leanna has agreed to do that. In turn, this could be spelled out in any agreement so WHCA personnel would know what they are authorized to do.

Incidentally, Leanna mentioned that IS&T personnel may be along on overnight trips, so WHCA personnel may only have to do this for day trips. She will advise once this is resolved. Adam, 5-1268

On the meeting, I am available anytime this week except on Wednesday from roughly 3:30 - 5:00 p.m. and on Friday from 12:30 - 2:30 p.m. I think Brett should join us -- since he is the office expert on designating things political versus official.

On the billing issue, the Judge has recommended a policy that would allow you pay the bills directly from the travel funds, unless the employee received a full per diem on the day of the travel. If the employee received a per diem to cover meals, he or she must pay for the meals eaten on Air Force One. So for past bills, where per diems were already given, staff member need to pay. But going forward, the recommended policy would allow you to institute a procedure whereby staff members receive a reduced per diem and then are not required to pay for meals on AFO.

Last I recall, we were trying to get a meeting together on this subject and some related matters. Can we try again for this week? I think the attendees were you, me, Jim Daniel with FMD and possibly Brett.

Also - think we have touched on this issue - I have the Airlift Ops bills for food on Air Force One. Are we still determining whether the staff bill can be paid for by Travel funds, or do the individuals have to reimburse directly. FMDs recommendation is that it may be paid from Travel Funds. Any thoughts?

thanks. vbm

Looks to me like AMK is campaigning for the Chief's seat.

Subject: The Supreme Court Today

Greetings, sportsfans. One opinion and one grant today.

Texas v. Cobb, 99-1702. Not to be confused with boxer-cum-spooky-looking actor Randall "Tex" Cobb, aka "The Lone Biker of the Apocalypse." Raymond Levi Cobb was not kind to small things. During a home burglary, he came across a woman and her child and kilt 'em both. While under arrest for an unrelated offense, he confessed to the burglary, but denied knowledge of a the disappearance of the woman and child. He was indicted for the burglary, and counsel was represented to appoint him. He later told his father about the murders, and his father ratted him out to the po-lice. Cobb must have been the confessing kind, because while in custody, he waived his Miranda rights and confessed to the murders. He was convicted of capital murder and sentenced to death. The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals reversed his conviction, holding that once the right to counsel attaches to the offense charged, it also attaches to any other offense that is very closely related factually to that offense; because the murders occurred during the course of the burglary, they were closely related to it. The court suppressed the confession, since it was made outside the presence of counsel.

The Chief delivered the 5-4 opinion of the Court, which was joined by the Usual Suspects. Unless you would like to know the precise details of how the state won, you can skip to the bottom.

Still here? You ARE insatiable. The Court began by stating that it "meant what it said" in McNeil v. Wisconsin (US 1991) where it had explained that "[t]he Sixth Amendment right [to counsel] . . . is offense specific" and thus "cannot be invoked once for all future prosecutions." Although noting that the Third, Fourth(!), Fifth(!), Sixth, and Ninth Circuits had interpreted Brewer v. Williams (US 1977 - the "Christian burial speech" case) and Maine v. Moulton (US 1985) to support the argument that McNeil's "offense-specific" right-to-counsel extended to crimes that are "factually related" to a charged offense, it declined to read McNeil in that way. Oh sure, the Court in Brewer had suppressed a confession to a murder because the right to counsel had attached in a factually related abduction case, but that case did not squarely address the question presented here, and "[c]onstitutional rights are not defined by inference from opinions which do not address the question at issue." (This is a very handy principle; under it, you can distinguish virtually every case that isn't on all fours with your own, which is most of 'em.) Moulton didn't squarely address the question either, and what's more, there the Court took pains to note that excluding evidence pertaining to charges as to which Sixth Amendment rights hadn't attached "would unnecessarily frustrate the public's interest in the investigation" of crime.

The Chief is a remarkably efficient author. If you cut out the three pages spent distinguishing Brewer and Moulton, his entire constitutional analysis boils down to one tidy paragraph (slip op. at 8-9) in which he gives two reasons not to extend the right to counsel to factually related offenses. (1) Miranda offers protection enough, and "police scrupulously followed Miranda's dictates when questioning respondent," especially if you don't count the twenty-minute beating with a rubber hose. (2) The "Constitution does not negate society's interest in the ability of police to talk to witnesses and suspects, even those who have been charged with other offenses." (Citing McNeil.) Hey presto, no constitutional violation.

Because the Sixth Amendment applies to anything is part of the same offense, that leaves the question of defining what an "offense" is. Because the Blockburger test has done such a good job of sowing confusion over the years, the Court decided to adopt it in this context too. Thus, when the Sixth Amendment right to counsel attaches, it encompasses offenses that, even if not formally charged, would be considered the same offense under Blockburger. The Chief disputed the dissenters' claim that a Blockburger-based test is any more confusing to administer than a vague "closely related to" test, arguing that it's hard for police to tell how closely related one event is to another when an investigation is still ongoing.

The Chief has never approved of the application of an Edwards-type exclusionary rule to the Sixth Amendment context (he and SOC were among the three dissenters when the Court first applied it in this way in the Stevens-authored Michigan v. Jackson (US 1986)), so he must have been pleased to limit its application. The lamb didn't quite make it all the way home, but it's closer now than it's been since 1986.

Justice Kennedy wrote an opinion concurring in WHR's "altogether sufficient" majority (words every author loves to hear), and was joined by Justices Antonin G. (yes, "G.") Scalia and Clarence Thomas. You don't normally think of AMK writing hawkish opinions in criminal procedure cases, but this one was cut from the same bolt of cloth as his early (1988) dissent in Arizona v. Roberson. He wrote to commend the Court for not reaffirming or approving Michigan v. Jackson, whose "underlying theory . . . seems questionable." (Remarkably, CT didn't file his own opinion. Because the majority opinion does not discuss Jackson at any length, I guess it didn't trigger Justice Thomas's software that automatically calls all pre-1992 precedents into question.) His basic beef was that there was no point to suppressing confessions where a person receives Miranda rights and voluntarily waives them; as he said, it is "difficult to understand the utility of a Sixth Amendment rule that operates to invalidate a confession given by the free choice of suspects who have received proper advice of their Miranda rights but waived them nonetheless."

Justice Breyer dissented, joined by Justices Stevens, Souter, and Ginsburg. He argued that the Court's Blockburger test (which he maligned as "extraordinarily difficult to administer") was an "unnecessarily technical definition [that] undermine[s] Sixth Amendment protections while doing nothing to further effective law enforcement." Several pages are devoted to disputing Kennedy's concurrence and arguing that Jackson is (as it should be) still good law. He complained that the Blockburger approach - which he found as impenetrable as a "Serbonian Bog," which, remarkably, is the only type of wetland not protected by the Clean Water Act - undermined Sixth Amendment protections, because for any "offense," there were a plethora of closely related crimes which were nonetheless sufficiently distinct not to come within the scope of that test.

And on the Order List: The Court just can't get enough of sexually violent predator statutes. The Court handed down its most recent opinion on the subject on January 19 (Seling v. Young), and already it's back in action with its latest grant, Kansas v. Crane, 00-957. The state of Kansas seeks review of the state supreme court's holding that the 14th Amendment Due Process Clause requires a finding that an offender suffers from volitional impairment that renders him dangerous "beyond his control" before he can be civilly committed under the state civil commitment statute. It's the Court's second case involving the Kansas Sexually Violent Predator statute, the first being OT96's Kansas v. Hendricks.

Also, it appears that three cases have been relisted: Clark County v. Breeden, 00-866 (whether a particular job transfer constitutes an "adverse employment action" for a Title VII retaliation claim); Toyota Motor Co. v. Williams, 00-1089 (whether an isolated injury precluding an individual from one particular job constitutes a 'disability' under the ADA); Major League Baseball Players Ass'n v. Garvey, 00-1210 (involving review of an arbitrator's ruling); MLBPA asked for summary reversal, so that is among the possibilities for April 16, but I PROMISE you that it wasn't done today. Finally, on the Schmuck v. United States Memorial Bad-Name docket, cert. was denied today in 00-8292, Eric Beaver v. West Virginia.

The Court isn't sitting again until April 16. Until then, that's today's baseball!

Moose forwarded this to me.

Your home e-mail and computer are always subject to subpoena in the event of a congressional or grand jury investigation, regardless whether you use your home computer to access your office e-mail. Your personal e-mail account is not subject to the Presidential Records Act, however, regardless whether you use your home computer to access office e-mail.
The bottom line, therefore, is that nothing changes from a records perspective when you access your office e-mail from home.

Good morning! Many of you have secure ID cards which allow you to access your voice mail off-site. You can also access your email using this card. Some software has to be installed on your home computer however.

I don't know what impact this may have on the privacy of your home-based computer. We'll put in a request to Moose Cobb to check that out.

In the meantime, if you'd like this access, please let me know. I'll put in a request to have the software made available. NOTE TO BOB: I'll put in a request for you :)

Regards,
Janet

Please find attached the latest "By the Numbers," which shows the President is shaping the tax cut debate and building strong support for his plan.

As always, I would appreciate it if you would pass this on to the appropriate members of your respective offices. Hard copies were distributed to Senior Staff this morning. Thank you - and if there is now a working distribution list for your group, please let me know, and I will use it next time.

President's Tax Cut Continues to Resonate

"One thing is crystal clear in this week's…poll: Americans are thinking about tax cuts. Whether the focus is congressional agendas or…the federal budget surplus, taxes are a priority."
-Fox News Poll Analysis

SUMMARY

- According to a new Fox News/Opinion Dynamics survey, the public believes the most important issue for the federal government to address is taxes. Since January, the tax issue has risen almost 20%, from fifth to first on the list.
- When asked how the surplus should be spent, the most popular response was "tax cuts."
- Support for the President's tax plan remains strong at 55%, unchanged from the past two Fox surveys.
- Americans overwhelmingly believe a reduction in long-term overall tax rates (70%) is more important than an immediate rebate (21%).
- 8 in 10 Americans describe a tax cut as a return of their own money rather than government taking money away from other things to give to them.

I am not sure I'll make the meeting; but I would suggest that, in addition to the sections you mentioned, we have headings for "character and temperment" and "competence and qualifications." These are factors that both the Judge and the President seem particularly interested in selecting judicial nominees. It also covers some of the factors that the ABA traditionally looked at, and I think it is helpful to make our assessment of those factors explicit.

We do letters from the President congratulating people for years of service (30 years being a fireman, nurse, etc.). Can we provide messages for those who have worked for the same company for a number of years, i.e., 35 years with Bloomingdales, etc.? Not sure if we want to name the company. Is that okay?

Having completed all of my disappointee calls, it is fair to say that everyone was enormously grateful to hear the news directly from us.
I think this is a practice we should certainly continue.

Moose/Brett--I'm reviewing some new information our security folks will be posting on the intranet on Computer security. They have a bullet on personal use of the internet. I'd like to suggest that they arrange a link to Judge Gonzales February 21 memo on this (the policy on unofficial use of government office equipment), which they could probably scan in.
Any objection? Adam

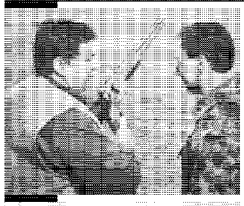
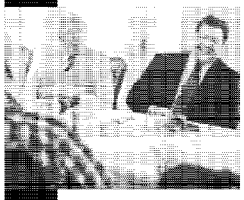
What Conservative Leaders are Saying About Bill Shuster:



As a ten year member, Bill Shuster has received the highest "A" rating from the National Rifle Association on issues important to Sportsmen.

Sportsmen



"Bill Shuster is the only candidate to receive our Honorary Guardian of Seniors Award for his pro-senior positions on lowering taxes, protecting Social Security and Medicare, and providing prescription drug coverage for seniors. He is a proven friend of senior citizens"

Jim Martin,
President, 60 Plus Seniors

Seniors

"Taxpaying families across the 9th district should be comforted by the principled committment candidate Shuster has made to them. His decision to sign the pledge in opposition to future tax increases demonstrates that he will fight to lower taxes for all Americans."

Grover Norquist,
Americans for Tax Reform

Fighting for Lower Taxes for Families and Business

Bill Shuster strongly supports the Bush Plan to cut taxes for families and local business. And while the Democratic candidate has raised taxes on families and seniors, Bill has put his commitment to our families in writing, by signing the Taxpayer Protection Pledge.

Protecting Our Seniors

Because of Bill's pro-senior positions, he is the only candidate to receive the Honorary Guardian of Seniors Award. He will fight to strengthen Social Security and Medicare, and provide better prescription drug benefits for our seniors.

Standing Up for Conservative Values

As a lifelong conservative, Bill Shuster lives central Pennsylvania's values each day. Whether it's protecting unborn life, our 2nd Amendment right to bear arms, or pro-family values, Bill can be trusted as our conservative voice in Congress.

"Bill Shuster's experience in the community makes him the ideal candidate to stand up for Central Pennsylvania's values and support our agenda of tax relief and job creation in Congress."

President George Bush

On behalf of the President, I want to acknowledge and thank you for your kind invitation to _____. The President is pleased to accept. Your event has been entered on the President's schedule for (date)(time).

As you know, the air travel, ground transportation, food, lodging, and other incidental activities of the President and others who attend or assist with this event will generate certain costs that must be reimbursed by [host entity]. In particular, because this is a political event, costs that are unrelated to Presidential security, communications, and the ongoing duties of the Presidency generally must be borne by the appropriate political entity and not by the Government. In order to ensure proper payment of these costs, an advance payment of $15,000 is required as a deposit. Please send a check for that amount at least 48 hours before the event to:

Republican National Committee
Attention: Jay Banning

The RNC will coordinate directly with the White House to ensure that all invoices related to the event are paid. Once the invoices have been paid, the RNC will coordinate with you and either reimburse any remaining funds or inform you of any additional amount that is owed.

Thank you again for your invitation to this event. The President looks forward to attending.

Libby, a guy named Joseph Whitsitt called to check on an old problem he has from the Nixon era. It has something to do with the Treasury dept. and treasury bills and the request for an executive order and something else I did not understand.

He says he has called the Justice Dept., the Treasury Dept. and has spoken with our DPC, and probably someone in legal. Can you see if someone would call him or has spoken to him about this. I told him that we were not able to help him but he is going to keep calling until we are able to give him a legal reason we cannot intervene.

Here is his info.

If there is nothing to do that is fine. I just wanted to see if there was an explanation for this guy.

Thanks carol

PROCEDURES FOR POLITICAL EVENTS INVOLVING THE PRESIDENT

These guidelines may require updating as circumstances surrounding political events evolve. Costs associated with any political trip involving the President should follow the guidelines listed below:

1. The Scheduling Office issues Approved Presidential Activity (APA) for political event.

2. The White House Management Office will review the following:

    a) Determine whether hard time or hypothetical formula (only when the President is a candidate) applies.
    b) Estimate political percentage and costs of trip for deposit purposes.

3. The Political Affairs Office will be responsible for the following:

    a) Sending a separate hosting letter detailing procedures for trip deposit (including amount) with the Republican National Committee (RNC.)
    b) Communicating that the check should be made payable to the Republican National Committee, that all deposits must be received 48 hours prior to event and the deposit should be sent overnight mail to the below address:

        Republican National Committee
        Attention: Jay C. Banning
        310 First Street, SE
        Washington, DC 20003
        (202) 863-8560

    c) Communicating that the event host should pay for site costs directly.

4. The RNC will be responsible for ensuring the following:

    a) The RNC will confirm with Political Affairs that check has been received.
    b) The RNC will set up separate accounts for each deposit.
    c) Only those invoices related to the candidate or party making the deposit will be paid from each account.
    e) When the RNC has the assurance that all costs associated with the event have been paid, they will return any remaining funds to the candidate or party.

5. The White House Management Office will be responsible for the following:

    a) A Trip Summary is prepared by White House Management and circulated for approval from the Counsel, Advance Office and Political Affairs.

b) Any outstanding expenses should be forwarded to White House Management and they will be forwarded to the RNC for reimbursement. Staff should not forward any expenses directly to the RNC.

c) A copy of approved trip memo is forwarded to the Military Office for any DOD and AF1 expenses (100% official travelers will be denoted.) The Military Office will coordinate with the White House Management Office for any expenses requiring reimbursement.

Good morning! The North Carolina Bankers Association would like the President to tape remarks for their upcoming annual conference. Since it is a state group, the preliminary decision was to try and see if we could draft generic remarks for the President and then utilize the same tape for other banking associations for the next couple of months. This brings up two questions:

1. The North Carolina Bankers are willing to cover the cost of taping (if approved, the taping will be done in conjunction with other tapings to keep cost down). Is the re-use of the tape something we can do?

2. If it is acceptable to re-use the tape, how would we allocate costs to the North Carolina Bankers?

Your guidance would be greatly appreciated. We're on a tight turnaround so anything you can do asap would be great.

Many thanks!
Janet

I see no problem with re-using the tape. As to the costs of the tape, one approach is simply to inform them that we may want to re-use the tape and ask them whether they have any problem with that. A second approach is for the government to reimburse them for the cost of the tape and then there would be no problem re-using it.

JUDGMENT CALL: Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Hatch of Utah floats a change so that only one home-state senator, not both, need approve a judge's nomination before a committee hearing. With Bush set to send his first judicial nominees to the Hill, Democrats complain that they would lose leverage in 13 states.

That is correct. This is a traditional situation where government officials simply brief an affected industry on Administration policy and accept questions from and listen to concerns of the affected industry representatives. That is part of the President's constitutional duty and thus is entirely permissible.

leaving message on this - the VP Office was pretty intent on including some form of language to tell the coal leaders:
"The National Energy Policy Development Group has not yet finished their study and will not yet release their work and is restricted from doing so by regulatory procedures." The worry being that we need to make it clear to these folks that this is NOT a meeting wherein they are being asked to affect/change the upcoming policy - especially considering all the open-meetings laws, etc., that are being levelled against the group now.
please let me know your thoughts at you earliest convenience -
thanks -

PRE-NOMINATION TALKING POINTS REGARDING JUDICIAL NOMINEES

- President Bush's most important criterion in picking judges is quality: the public should expect to see a highly qualified group of lawyers of demonstrable intellect, experience, and character appointed by this Administration

- The first slate of federal judges will likely reflect President Bush's desire to go the extra mile to ensure that his Administration seeks out qualified women and minorities for service at the highest levels of the federal government

- Consistent with President Bush's effort to change the tone in Washington and encourage constructive bipartisan cooperation, it wouldn't be at all surprising to see a Democrat or two among the judges appointed

- President Bush is strongly opposed to playing politics with federal judges, having expressed the view during the campaign – with which prominent Senate Democrats including the ranking minority member of the Judiciary Committee, Senator Leahy, agreed – that all candidates should receive a vote within 60 days of a hearing. We hope and expect that Senate Democrats will share that view and act responsibly toward judicial nominees.

- We look forward to having the Administration's judicial nominees evaluated and confirmed on their merits. Historically, new presidents in their first years in office have all of their judicial nominees confirmed quite rapidly. This was true in the first Bush Administration, when a Democratic Senate confirmed 100% of President Bush's nominees in the first year, and it was true in the Clinton Administration, when the Republicans allowed more than 100 judges to be confirmed without difficulty in the first couple years.

BAN THE BLUE SLIP;
ONE SENATOR SHOULDN'T VETO A JUDICIAL NOMINEE

It's not exactly news that both political parties in Congress can behave hypocritically. The latest example involves the confirmation of nominees to the federal courts, a hot subject as President Bush prepares to send his first judicial nominees to the Senate.

Under an arcane and indefensible Senate tradition, a judicial nominee can be held hostage because a single home-state senator sends a "blue slip" to the Judiciary Committee objecting to the candidate's confirmation. Now that one of their own is in the White House, the Republicans who control the Senate (thanks to the tie-breaking vote of Vice President Dick Cheney) want to modify the blue-slip tradition.

Under a proposal by Sen. Orrin Hatch, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, an objection to a judicial nominee by one home-state senator could be overcome by a statement of support from another. Thus, in states with one senator from each party, a Republican senator could

trump the blue slip deployed by his Democratic colleague.

Democrats, who objected to the blue-slipping of some of Bill Clinton's judicial nominees, are suddenly discovering the virtue of the blue slip -- or, as the practice is known at college fraternities, the blackball. And they are receiving support from other quarters.

A recent editorial in The New York Times urged that "Democrats and Republican moderates use every weapon at their disposal to force Mr. Bush and his Senate allies to a position of moderation on judicial appointments. Those weapons can include insistence on judicious use of the blue-slip policy. . . ."

We disagree. What was bad for the goose is bad for the gander. The Constitution does not give individual senators any veto power over judicial nominees. The one-senator veto is a mere custom -- one that ill serves the federal bench.

This newspaper objected during the Clinton administration when Republican Sen. Rick Santorum blocked the confirmation of Pittsburgh lawyer John Bingler for a seat on U.S. District Court here. We are equally opposed to a single Democratic senator blackballing a George W. Bush nominee.

That doesn't mean the president's judicial nominees -- especially nominees to the U.S. Supreme Court -- should be rubber-stamped. We share the fear of some senators that Mr. Bush might exalt ideology over competence in naming federal judges. We are also troubled by Mr. Bush's decision to end the American Bar Association's traditional (and constructive) role in screening potential judges.

That said, no nominee should be hostage to the whims of a single senator. If Mr. Bush proposes objectionable candidates for the federal courts -- especially the Supreme Court -- Democrats (and thoughtful Republicans) should feel free to vote those nominees down in committee or on the floor, or even resort to a filibuster. Those responses are consistent with the Constitution's grant of "advise and consent" authority to the Senate as a body. The blue slip is not.

From a recent announcement by Lexis-Nexis:

NEXIS.COM ENHANCED

Quick Search is the new name for the tool formerly known as Search on the nexis.com(SM) home page. And Quick Search has even more content! It now features the ability to search 60 days of news as well as two years of company, Web, and legislative data.

We removed the radio buttons for all words, any words, or exact phrase from the Quick Search form. However, you can still search phrases by using quotation marks around the search terms. For example, enter "workplace morale" into the query form to search for the phrase workplace morale. The search engine that powers the nexis.com service interprets words within quotes as a phrase.

Another new feature is that nexis.com evaluates the search against all documents in the databases being searched and retrieves the most relevant documents. Previously, only the 1,000 most recent documents were ranked by relevance. This new feature delivers more on-target search results, saving you even more time!

Even Before Bush Can Name Them, Democrats, GOP Clash Over Judges; Senate: Parties are at odds over rules for nominating jurists. The fighting could escalate soon as lawmakers vow to block two Justice Dept. nominees.

BYLINE: DAVID G. SAVAGE, TIMES STAFF WRITERS

DATELINE: WASHINGTON

BODY:
Partisan skirmishing over prospective judges, a regular feature of the Clinton years, has broken out early in President Bush's term, even before he makes his first nominations to the courts.

In the Senate, the focus of the current fighting between Democrats and Republicans is, of all things, the blue slips of paper on which senators assess nominees.

If "blue slip" rules cannot be worked to their satisfaction at a meeting of the Senate Judiciary Committee on Thursday, Democratic senators say they will block two of Bush's top Justice Department nominees--Theodore B. Olson as solicitor general and Larry Thompson as deputy attorney general.

And the conflict could escalate when Bush announces his first round of nominees, which is likely to be next week. "It will be soon. That's all I can say," White House spokesman Scott McClellan said Tuesday.

Democrats acknowledge that they are still angry over Republicans' blocking of President Clinton's court nominees. Sometimes the nominees were denied even a hearing.

With the Senate now evenly split between the parties, the Democrats say they want an equal voice in approving judges.

In sharp rejoinder, Sen. Orrin G. Hatch, the Utah Republican who chairs the Judiciary Committee, said Democrats need to accept that the election is over and President Bush won.

If nothing else, the pregame clash shows that both parties are intensely concerned about the ideological makeup of the federal courts.

"The politics of judicial confirmation seems to have ratcheted up yet again," said Sheldon Goldman, a political science professor at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst who has tracked judgeship fights for two decades. "The Republicans systematically blocked Clinton nominees, and now the Democrats look ready to do the same."

By long tradition, U.S. senators have had strong influence over the federal judges who are selected to serve in their home states. The Judiciary Committee chairman solicits their views on a blue slip of paper.

After Republicans took control of the Senate in 1995, the "blue slip" process became the means for GOP senators to block Clinton's court nominees. "No further proceedings on this nominee will be scheduled until both blue slips have been returned by the nominee's home state senators," Hatch wrote on the form.

Sen. Jesse Helms (R-N.C.) vetoed three African American nominees to the all-white U.S. 4th Circuit Court of Appeals by not returning a blue slip. The state's Democratic senator, John Edwards, strongly supported the nominees.

With a Republican now in the White House, Hatch announced what appeared to be a change.

The views of home state senators as set forth on their blue slips "will be taken into consideration," he said at a recent hearing, but they will not be decisive.

Democrats were furious. They interpreted Hatch's new policy as a move to strip them of influence over Bush's nominees.

California has two Democratic senators, Dianne Feinstein and Barbara Boxer, but the Bush White House decided to nominate Rep. Christopher Cox (R-Newport Beach) and state Judge Carolyn Kuhl to the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeals without consulting them.

Maryland has two Democratic senators, yet Bush apparently is ready to name attorney Peter Keisler, a former clerk to Judge Robert H. Bork, to fill a Maryland seat on the 4th Circuit.

In North Carolina, Bush is expected to nominate Judge Terry Boyle, a protege of Helms, to the 4th Circuit. It is unclear whether Sen. Edwards will have any influence over that move.

Last week, the nine committee Democrats sent a letter to White House Counsel Alberto Gonzales saying that they wanted to be consulted in advance on prospective judges.

"In a 50-50 Senate, and after the closest national election in our history, this should be a time for finding more ways to work together on judicial nominees," said Sen. Patrick J. Leahy (D-Vt.), the committee's ranking Democrat. Both sides should seek "high-quality consensus candidates in whom all Americans can have confidence."

In Thursday's meeting, Democrats are expected to press Hatch to give them the same influence home-state Republicans had in the Clinton era.

"The Democrats are saying that the policy has been good enough for you for the last six years, it is good enough for us now," said David Carle, a spokesman for Leahy.

However, a spokeswoman for Hatch denies the Democrats' charge that the blue-slip policy is being changed.

"The policy has been to take into the account the home state senators' views and they will be considered," said Margarita Tapia, press secretary for Hatch. "As far as we are concerned, we are not changing anything, so there's nothing to discuss."

Bush's nominees to the U.S. courts of appeals, where there are 31 vacancies, are expected to trigger political opposition. Those judges oversee trial courts and set the law in their regions.

While Supreme Court vacancies can spark huge political battles, Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist, 76, and Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, 71, are saying they have no plans to retire this year. Those two, along with 81-year-old Justice John Paul Stevens, are seen as most likely to retire in the next few years.

The trial courts are expected to be less controversial.

In California, Feinstein has worked out an agreement with Bush's advisors to set up a six-member commission to recommend new judges for the districts based in Los Angeles, San Diego, San Francisco and Sacramento. Three commission members will be Republicans and three will be chosen by the two Democratic senators.

For Bush, Helms lifts block on judges
Now, Democrats plan fight over 4th Circuit

By PETER WALLSTEN
Observer Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON -- With a Republican in the White House, U.S. Sen. Jesse Helms said Tuesday he doesn't oppose adding a North Carolinian to the 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

Helms, a Republican, spent eight years blocking nominations by President Bill Clinton to the court, arguing that adding more judges was a waste of taxpayer money.

But suddenly Helms is not so defiant. "It's his call," Helms told The Observer, referring to President Bush's anticipated nominations of at least one conservative North Carolinian to the court.

His flip-flop has angered Senate Democrats, including Sen. John Edwards, D-N.C., who vowed Tuesday to fight the GOP on President Bush's nominations to a variety of posts, including the 4th Circuit.

"I will use whatever procedural tool is available to make sure that there is balance in terms of the people going on the court," Edwards said. "After being blocked over eight years from even having a nominee considered for a vote, we're not now going to just roll over and let them put their people through."

The 4th Circuit, based in Richmond, Va., is considered the nation's most conservative appeals court. Its cases come from the Carolinas, Virginia, Maryland and West Virginia and include Charlotte's school desegregation lawsuit.

The Senate, evenly divided between Democrats and Republicans, must confirm all presidential nominees for federal judgeships. That means the judiciary has become the chief venue for the ideological battle between liberals and conservatives.

While Clinton looked mostly for moderate nominees, in hopes of winning over Senate Republicans, Bush has made it his priority to find conservatives for the federal bench.

The president recently announced that he would end the long-held tradition of vetting potential judicial nominees through the American Bar Association, a change that angered Democrats.

The White House is expected to announce its first round of court nominations this month, and the list could include as many as two conservative N.C. jurists for the 4th Circuit: Terrence Boyle, a Helms prot?g? and federal district judge, and Bill Webb, an African American federal magistrate. Both are from Raleigh.

Although North Carolina is the biggest state in the circuit, it has no judges on the court. And although the circuit's population is about a fourth black, there has never been a permanent black member of the court.

In 1999, Clinton nominated Judge James Wynn of the N.C. Court of Appeals. Helms blocked the nomination, keeping Wynn from becoming the court's first black member.

Edwards, who argued last year that it was crucial for North Carolina to have a representative on the appeals court, is prepared to filibuster if necessary to block a nominee he does not support ideologically.

Helms has long sought to win Boyle a seat on the 4th Circuit. He was angry when Democrats stifled Boyle's nomination by Bush's father when he was president. The Clinton White House tried to cut a deal with Helms during the president's second term to nominate Boyle plus two Democrats. The deal was rejected.

Wynn, whose nomination was pulled back by Bush after he took office in January, said Tuesday he is puzzled by Helms' new stance. During his interview with Helms in 1999, he said, the senator reacted angrily when Wynn suggested politics might be the real explanation for Helms' opposition.

"He was quite firm with me that this was not about politics, but that the circuit did not need any more judges," Wynn said. "I had no choice but to take him at his word."

Helms said Tuesday that he still believes the 4th Circuit does not need more judges. The court has 15 slots; 11 are filled.

The White House recently sent a letter to Helms acknowledging his stance, but saying the president intended to offer nominations. Helms' office has been working closely with the Bush team in selecting those nominees.

Edwards, who recommended Wynn to Clinton in 1999, said Tuesday that he has been shut out of the process. He said he had not talked to Helms about the Bush nominations.

"He's consistently told me in the past that there is no need for any additional judges on the court," Edwards said. "He's not told me that his opinion on that has changed."

Meanwhile, Senate Republicans have been looking for ways to restrict their opponents' ability to obstruct court nominations.

In blocking Wynn, Helms relied on an arcane Senate tradition known as the "blue slip," the little piece of Carolina-blue paper on which two senators indicated their support for a nominee from their state. Both senators' approval was required for the full body to confirm a nominee, giving individual senators enormous power to stymie an appointment.

Senate Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, has said in recent weeks that he may alter the rule so both senators' approval is not required - in effect removing Edwards' ability to block a Bush nominee.

Senate Democrats met privately Tuesday and agreed to fight Hatch.

"At the 4th Circuit, if the nominee is out of North Carolina, obviously we'd want a blue slip from both senators," said Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont, the senior Democrat on the Judiciary Committee. "If the Republicans felt it was good enough for the Democrats, we feel it's good enough for the Republicans." Helms

Senate Braces for Squabbles Over Federal Judge Appointees

Thursday, May 03, 2001

Email this Article

WASHINGTON * Bush administration officials say that when the president announces his nominees for the federal bench, one will be a Clinton choice who would, if approved, become the first African-American to serve on the 4th Circuit Court of Appeals.

The president and his staff are convinced naming Roger Gregory to the bench will appease Democrats complaining about an unfair judgeship selection process.

In December, Clinton appointed Gregory to the 4th Circuit seat temporarily while Congress was in recess, in response to inaction by the Senate. At the time, the move infuriated many Republicans.

But Virginia Republicans George Allen and John Warner, who view Gregory as a moderate, have urged Bush to go ahead with the nomination in the hopes it will satisfy Democrats enough to make other appointments easier to pass through the Senate Judiciary Committee.

"The president is going to appoint Republicans," said Sen. Patrick Leahy of Vermont, the ranking Democratic member of the committee. "We're prepared to vote for them. But not if the senators have been ignored in the person's home state."

In the past, a U.S. senator could effectively stop a nomination for a federal judgeship in his state by indicating a lack of support on a piece of paper known as a "blue slip" 3 or by not returning the slip at all. Nine percent of the appellate court nominations were not acted on during the Reagan administration and 36 percent in the Clinton years, in part because of such maneuvers.

"The Republicans did in fact hold up a great number of judicial nominees," said Jonathan Turley, a professor of law at George Washington University. "They were very assertive in the use of this senatorial privilege, this prerogative to essentially freeze a nominee. So it's going to be hard to get this away from the Democrats."

Committee Chairman Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, who has raised the possibility of occasionally bypassing the blue slips, said he is simply pursuing what the Democrats have wanted until now.

"Only under very extraordinary circumstances would the judiciary chairman ignore that particular negative blue slip," Hatch said. "We9 ve always abided by that, and frankly it's an overblown issue."

Still, the squabbling has already delayed confirmation hearings on top Justice Department officials, including Solicitor General nominee Ted Olson. And the White House is looking to fill an unusually large number of federal judgeships: 67 on the district courts and 31 on the appellate level.

So Bush administration officials are treading carefully, saying senators of both parties will be consulted. It is their hope Gregory's appointment will make it tougher for Democrats to attack other more conservative judges expected on the list.

ACTION:

Review this message to learn about how the far right is attempting to hijack the federal judiciary. We are currently monitoring possible nominees-and we are counting on you to help and to voice your opposition to right-wing nominations. Please be prepared to contact your senators when we call you to action on this issue in the coming weeks.

SENATE REPUBLICANS BLOCKED QUALIFIED WOMEN AND MINORITIES

Throughout the Clinton administration the Republican leadership held up the confirmation of qualified judicial nominees. The blocked nominees were disproportionately women and minorities. People For the American Way recently published a report recounting the right's blatant and highly successful blockade of President Clinton's nominations to the federal bench, especially in the last two years of his presidency. To read this report, please visit:

http://www.pfaw.org/courts/attacks.pdf

SENATE REPUBLICANS CHANGING THE RULES

Even though President Bush has not officially announced his nominees to the federal judiciary, Senate Republicans are already making moves to speed up the process and help the far right take over the judiciary! In fact, some zealous Republicans are trying to change the rules to assure that their nominees get confirmed. Judiciary Committee Chairman Orrin Hatch is proposing to change the process used during the Clinton administration. These rules allowed Jesse Helms to block a majority of Clinton-era nominees to the federal bench in North Carolina. The so-called "blue-slip" policy blocked a nomination if one or both senators from the nominee's state objected. Sen. Hatch wants to radically alter the blue-slip system so that it is more difficult for senators to have meaningful input into judicial nominations from their state. Keep in mind that these are the very rules that Republicans used to block so many of Clinton's appointments.

MORE CONCESSIONS TO THE FAR RIGHT

President Bush's decision to take the American Bar Association out of the process only illustrates further the concessions this White House is making to the far right. To read PFAW President Ralph G. Neas' comments regarding this decision, please visit:

http://pfaw.org/news/press//2001-03-22.239.phtml

After rejecting the ABA's counsel, President Bush turned to the right-wing Federalist Society. Nearly 30 percent of nominees interviewed by the White House were recommended by the Federalist Society. To learn more about this right-wing lawyer's group and its new role in the process, please visit:

http://www.guardian.co.uk/Archive/Article/0,4273,4177480,00.html

The right wing is counting on the Bush administration to fill the courts with right-wing ideologues. It is crucial that Americans communicate with their senators and let them know that they do not want a right-wing judiciary on any level. Please communicate that message by calling or writing your senator. There are several possible ultra right-wing nominees we'll need your help opposing. Look out for upcoming alerts on this subject.

Matthew2:

Wednesday morning at 9 am is the new time for the weekly Catholic teleconference: we want to move on this before the judicial announcement is made tomorrow afternoon. Brad Berenson, of counsel, will fill in all the details on the call to our Catholic supporters.

Also, want to remind everyone that in addition to the 1. CSE meeting yesterday, 2. the weekly conservative teleconference last night, and the 3. 4pm coalition meeting today at CSE, Tim Flannigan will speak at Norquist and Weyrich tomorrow.

One other note: there will be two special teleconferences today at 2pm and 5pm that are being arranged off campus to update key folks about the announcement.

It has shaped up to be a very good coalition week.

Warmly

I have continued calling Biden's and Kennedy's office but no luck in

Most recent calls were Monday, May 7

Spoke to Keisha in Biden's office and left word for Molly (again) to call me about setting up a time.

Spoke to Stephanie in Kennedy's office and reminded her we are ready to meet - all we need is a time.

You are all invited to attend the President's announcement of his first judicial nominations. The event will be tomorrow (May 9, 2001) in the East Room of the White House. Please plan to be at the East Wing by 1:45pm. The President will make remarks at 2:30pm and the event should be concluded by approximately 2:45 or 2:50pm. Because this is a public event with open press, please make sure that your passes are not visible once you enter the East Room.

If you are coming from DOJ, you should plan to be at the East Gate Visitors Entrance of the White House at 1:45pm with a photo ID.

The Social Office has asked that we remind everyone that this event is for the nominees and their families. They asked that we remind staff not to crowd the President and to request that staff not linger too long after the event.

If you have any questions, please contact Jason Torchinsky at 202-456-5049.

Hi Brett! Attached is a draft response. Because Larry gets letters from constituents facing challenges and problems, I'd like to make sure I understand the restrictions under which he must operate. Can you please review the draft and make the reference to restrictions is accurate?

Many thanks!

Sorry for the delay on this. You asked about how to respond to Christie Fox. I think a standard response letter from you or from correspondence is appropriate. There is not much else to do with something like that. Thanks and please follow up with any additional questions.

Dear Ms. Fox:

Thank you very much for your letter. Please accept my apologies for the delay in my response. It sounds as if you have had a difficult time in recent years. Please know that President Bush is dedicated to doing everything he can to raise the future prospects and standard of living for all Americans.

I understand your concerns and the challenges you are facing. Without complete information however, it is difficult for me to address the details of your specific situation. In addition, there are restrictions on me prohibiting me from making inquiries on behalf of an individual before a federal agency. However, I would recommend that you alert your Member of Congress or U.S. Senator about your concerns regarding the Department of Education. They may be able to assist you.

Sincerely,

Lawrence B. Lindsey
Assistant to the President for Economic Policy

SENATE MINORITY LEADER DASCHLE AND OTHERS MAKE REMARKS ON PRESIDENT BUSH'S JUDICIAL APPOINTMENTS

MAY 9, 2001

SPEAKERS: U.S. SENATOR THOMAS DASCHLE (D-SD)
SENATE MINORITY LEADER
U.S. SENATOR PATRICK LEAHY (D-VT)
U.S. SENATOR CHARLES SCHUMER (D-NY)

Elapsed Time 00:00, Eastern Time 14:05

DASCHLE: Thank you for joining us. We just wanted to talk briefly, before my two colleagues go down to the White House, to further elaborate on our circumstances involving judges and the way the judicial nominations will be handled.

I can't thank Senator Leahy and Senator Schumer enough for the outstanding leadership they've provided for our caucus all the way through this process. They have the primary responsibility and have taken that responsibility very seriously.

If I might just say as leader, I'm pleased that the White House has chosen to work with us on the first group of nominations. We are pleased that by and large there are no blue slip problems. There is one glaring exception, and that is involving the justice nomination from the state of North Carolina.

But seven of the nominations do not have a blue slip because Democratic senators aren't involved. Three of the blue slips have been submitted in a positive way, and we have the negative blue slip.

Our process is going to be very simple: We will expect to be consulted, we will expect that that consultation involve the full participation of Democratic, as well as Republican senators. We think that's fulfilling the constitutional obligation that we have in the Senate, and our caucus is absolutely, unequivocally united in that regard.

But let me call upon my two colleagues for their comment, because they are in a hurry and need to get--at least Senator Leahy needs to get down to the White House.

Senator Leahy?

LEAHY: Thank you, Leader.

I thank Senator Daschle, who has kept the caucus closely informed on all this and kept us closely together.

It comes down to a basic sense of what is the Senate role and what is the role of an independent judiciary. We've always felt, both Republicans and Democrats, you do not want a judiciary that goes to the extreme right or to the extreme left, that there has to be an independent judiciary.

The Republicans felt that they had a very fair process, what they described as a very fair process in determining whether nominations by a Democratic president would go forward. We're saying, if it was fair there, it's fair the other way around. We will require the same process before a Republican president goes forward.
We're not trying to appoint judges, but we also feel the advise and consent does not mean appoint and rubber stamp. And we will make sure that it's a balanced judiciary. Just as the Republicans would feel they should keep a balanced judiciary with a Democratic president, we as Democrats feel there should be a balanced judiciary with a Republican president. We're not seeking anything more or less than what the Republicans sought when there was a Democratic president.
And we have a letter, which I assume somebody's going to pass out, but we'll have available to you signed by each member of the Senate Judiciary Committee given to Senator Hatch saying what we assume the procedure will be. That is the procedure we will insist upon. It is the procedure we'll expect. It's the procedure we will vote for. In a closely divided Senate, of course, it becomes the procedure that will be followed.
Now, we're going to have a meeting tomorrow morning on votes on some of the Justice Department nominees. I understand the chairman has said we'll go into executive session first to discuss some of the background reports on a couple of nominees, which makes sense, there are issues that should not be discussed in open, but we'll go forward and we'll see what comes out of that.
But read the letter, you'll see what our position is. All we want to do is make sure it is a balanced judiciary, and that is the Senate's role, and that is the Senate's role that will be carried out.
SCHUMER: Well, thank you.
I want to thank Senator Daschle and Senator Leahy, who have been our two leaders on this, for their support and strength and leadership on this issue.

> Ted Olson is a distinguished lawyer who has argued 15 cases before the > Supreme Court, in whose chambers he would represent the government if > confirmed as President Bush's nominee for Solicitor General.
> Unfortunately, because in private practice he successfully argued Bush v.
> Gore before the Court, finally ending the Florida Presidential contest, > the still-embittered Beltway Democratic machine has decided to make a > public spectacle of Mr. Olson and his nomination.
> Yesterday the Senate Judiciary Committee held up the nomination, following > the placement in the Washington Post of a classic piece of journalistic > insinuation without actually accusing Mr. Olson of anything real. Last > week committee Democrats walked out rather than vote on him.
> Senator Patrick Leahy, the ranking Democrat on Judiciary, claims to be > worried that Mr. Olson wasn't forthright before the committee about his > knowledge of the "Arkansas Project." This was the informal name that The > American Spectator magazine gave to its own efforts to investigate and > report on the political and financial history of Bill Clinton in his home > state. Various Clinton acolytes from Geraldo Rivera to Clinton aide Sidney
> Blumenthal spun the effort as something out of one of Robert Ludlum's > paranoid political thrillers.
> In fact, that characterization, like what is now being done to Ted Olson,

International Leadership on HIV/AIDS & Other Infectious Diseases

Today's Presidential Action

- Today President Bush will outline the U.S.' proposal for the key elements of a new global fund to fight HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis. This international public-private partnership will provide grants for prevention, treatment, and care.

- The President has a strong commitment to helping those who are infected with these diseases and saving countless lives by preventing new infections.

- The United States will back this international effort by providing $200 million in seed money for FY 2002. Additionally, the Administration will work with our allies in the G-8 and private foundations, corporations, faith-based groups and other organizations to generate additional support for this global effort.

The Administration's International Leadership on Preventing Disease:

- Collectively, HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis are ravaging developing nations, causing 25% of all deaths worldwide and trapping people in an endless cycle of sickness and despair. The Joint United Nations Programme on HIV/AIDS (UNAIDS) estimates that 36 million people are now living with HIV/AIDS. Seventy percent of these people are in sub-Saharan Africa, where HIV/AIDS is now the leading cause of death.

- Under President Bush's leadership, the United States will continue to pursue an integrated approach to fighting disease, focusing on prevention of new infections and training medical professionals, as well as treatment and care. The United States believes that we must continue and expand our efforts on prevention – the most proven and cost-effective way to address these global challenges.

- The global fund to fight HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis will be an important multilateral tool for addressing these global epidemics. The United States will continue to work with other countries to ensure that the global fund: (1) is a public-private partnership; (2) pursues an integrated approach, emphasizing prevention in a continuum of treatment and care; (3) focuses on "best practices" by funding a core menu of programs proven to work, then scaling up; (4) promotes scientific and medical accountability by requiring proposals to be reviewed for effectiveness by medical and public health experts; and (5) respects intellectual property rights as an important incentive for the development of new drugs.

- Today's announcement follows President Bush's move last month to expand the Office of National AIDS Policy (ONAP), giving the Office a broader mandate to facilitate domestic and international policy efforts on HIV/AIDS. ONAP is supporting a new high-level task force – co-chaired by the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and including the White House Domestic Policy Advisor and the National Security Advisor – to better coordinate the Administration's proactive activities and responses to all aspects of the domestic and international AIDS crisis.

Facts and Figures

- Collectively, HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis are ravaging developing nations, causing 25% of all deaths worldwide.

- Worldwide, more than 22 million people have died since the AIDS epidemic began in the 1970s.
- Tuberculosis accounted for 1.7 million deaths last year.
- Malaria killed more than 1 million people last year – mostly children in Africa.

The Administration's International Leadership on Preventing Disease

- The United States is the largest bilateral donor of HIV/AIDS assistance, providing for nearly 50% of all international HIV/AIDS funding.
- Under President Bush's leadership, the United States will continue to pursue an integrated approach to fighting disease, focusing on prevention of new infections and training medical professionals, as well as treatment and care. The United States believes that we must continue and expand our efforts on prevention – the most proven and cost-effective way to address these global challenges.
- The global fund to fight HIV/AIDS, malaria and tuberculosis will be an important multilateral tool for addressing these global epidemics.
- The United States will continue to work with other countries to ensure that the global fund:
  - ✓ (1) is a public-private partnership;
  - ✓ (2) pursues an integrated approach, emphasizing prevention in a continuum of treatment and care;
  - ✓ (3) focuses on "best practices" by funding a core menu of programs proven to work, then scaling up;
  - ✓ (4) promotes scientific and medical accountability by requiring proposals to be reviewed for effectiveness by medical and public health experts; and
  - ✓ (5) respects intellectual property rights as an important incentive for the development of new drugs.

The Bush Administration's HIV/AIDS Task Force

- In April, President Bush expanded the mandate of the Office of National AIDS Policy (ONAP) to better facilitate domestic and international policy efforts on HIV/AIDS.

- ONAP is supporting a new high-level task force – co-chaired by the Secretary of State and the Secretary of Health and Human Services, and including the White House Domestic Policy Advisor and the National Security Advisor – to coordinate the Administration's proactive activities and responses to all aspects of the domestic and international HIV/AIDS crisis.

The President's Budget Provides Needed Resources to Fight Infectious Diseases

- The President's budget:

  - ✓ Increases support for international HIV/AIDS assistance by $37 million for Fiscal Year 2002 to $480 million annually – an 8% increase from Fiscal Year 2001 and a 113% increase from Fiscal Year 2000.

  - ✓ Increases HIV/AIDS research by $258 million for Fiscal Year 2002, bringing total funding for HIV/AIDS research within the National Institutes of Health to $2.5 billion.

  - ✓ Doubles funding for the National Institutes of Health by 2003 and increases funding by $2.8 billion in Fiscal Year 2002 – the largest dollar increase ever in NIH history.

Justice lawyers recommend delay in execution

RON FOURNIER
AP White House Correspondent
WASHINGTON (AP) _ Justice Department lawyers have recommended that Attorney General John Ashcroft delay the execution of convicted Oklahoma City bomber Timothy McVeigh for 30 days, two government officials said Friday.

The officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Attorney General John Ashcroft was expected to approve the request later Friday. The recommendation came one day after the FBI disclosed that it had failed to turn over documents to McVeigh's defense.

McVeigh, 33, is scheduled to die Wednesday at a federal prison in Terre Haute, Ind.

The belated uncovering of the documents embarrassed the government and angered victims and their families. But it was not immediately clear whether McVeigh _ who had waived appeals in the past few months and claimed responsibility for the bombing _ would himself now seek a delay.

``We needed this death penalty,'' said Aren Almon Kok, whose baby daughter came to symbolize the 1995 blast through a photograph of her lifeless body in the arms of a firefighter.

``For someone to make this mistake ... to find them less than a week before he dies ... is unbelievably unfair,'' she said in Oklahoma City.

The Justice Department handed McVeigh's lawyers 3,135 documents it said should have been provided during the discovery phase of his 1997 trial in Denver. The existence of the documents was disclosed Thursday by CBS.

Kathleen Treanor, who lost her 4-year-old daughter and in-laws in the April 19, 1995, bombing, criticized the FBI as bungling the case and giving McVeigh the chance to extend his life.

``I'm appalled,'' she said. ``The FBI knew from the very beginning that this was a huge case. How could they have possibly made a mistake this huge?''

In a letter to McVeigh's attorneys, the Justice Department said the documents consist of FBI reports, including interview notes known as ''302s,'' and photocopies of physical evidence such as ``photographs, written correspondence and tapes.''

The documents came from 45 FBI offices in the United States and one in Paris.

A lawyer familiar with the case told The Associated Press that the materials contain information generated by thousands of phone calls made to the FBI after the bombing. They range from identifying a composite drawing of a possible suspect known as John Doe No. 2 to claims of seeing McVeigh elsewhere on the day of the bombing.

Legal analysts said the mistake could delay what would be the first federal execution since 1963, though it was unlikely to overturn McVeigh's conviction.

An attorney for McVeigh said the materials may prompt a request for a stay.

``We're considering all our options,'' McVeigh lawyer Nathan Chambers said after the documents were delivered to his office in Denver.

Chambers spoke to McVeigh about the documents, but he declined to elaborate except to say he couldn't rule anything out yet.

Asked Friday on CBS' ``The Early Show'' whether McVeigh would seek a stay, he said: ``The honest question to that is we don't know at this point. There are a number of options that may be available to Mr. McVeigh, and we have a lot of work to do.'' He gave a similar answer when asked if McVeigh would fight if the government sought a stay.

Another McVeigh attorney, Rob Nigh, arrived Thursday night in Indiana.

In a recently published book, McVeigh claimed sole responsibility for the bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, which killed 168 people and injured hundreds. Since December, when he first asked to end his appeals, he had not shown any interest in fighting his conviction or death sentence.

McVeigh's trial judge, U.S. District Judge Richard Matsch of Denver, could not be reached for comment. Court clerk James Manspeaker said the defense would have to go to the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, also in Denver, to file a motion to consider new evidence.

Matsch planned no action unless an appeal is filed. ``If something is filed he'll take a look at it,'' Manspeaker said.

The legal standard for granting such a motion requires the court to determine the verdict could have been different if the jury had been allowed to see the documents.

``The prosecution proved everything to me,'' said McVeigh juror Doug Carr, 45. ``If there was something left out that's in those files, I don't think it was that significant.''

McVeigh's former trial lawyer, Stephen Jones, said he wouldn't be surprised if the execution was stayed until the documents are reviewed.

``There could be a benign interpretation and it could all be irrelevant,'' Jones said. ``On the other hand, it could be a malignant failure to turn over.''

The Justice Department said the mistake was discovered after an FBI archivist requested bombing-related materials be sent to the Oklahoma field office.

The department asked defense attorneys to notify them if they believe the documents throw McVeigh's guilt into question.

``While the department is confident the documents do not in any way create any reasonable doubt about McVeigh's guilt and do not contradict his repeated confessions of guilt, the department is concerned that McVeigh's attorneys were not able to review them at the appropriate time,'' the agency said.

Chambers, who has worked on McVeigh's case since December 1998, said he learned about the documents Wednesday, when he received a telephone call from Sean Connelly, a prosecutor in the U.S. attorney's office in Denver.

``Here we are a full six years after the bombing and less than a week before Mr. McVeigh's scheduled execution and these reports mysteriously appear. So it's a cause for concern,'' Chambers said.

The lead prosecutor in the trial, Joseph Hartzler, told NBC News that McVeigh is ``a master of self-deception and self-worship.''

``If he wanted the death penalty, he could have stayed in the truck, or walked into the building,'' Hartzler said. ``He doesn't want to die, he's just giving into it because it's inevitable and somehow he thinks this is his way of declaring victory or something.''

The documents also were delivered Thursday to lawyers for co-defendant Terry Nichols, who was convicted of conspiracy and involuntary manslaughter and sentenced to life in prison.

Similar documents formed the basis of a previous, unsuccessful appeal by Nichols, who claimed the papers could have cleared him.

THE OLSON PROJECT
[Smearing a nominee for fun and profit.]

Not that you'd know it from Thomas Edsall's reporting in the Washington Post, but David Brock has had a grievance against Ted and Barbara Olson for years. Ted Olson is up for confirmation as President Bush's solicitor general. Yesterday, Edsall reported that Brock told the Senate Judiciary Committee that Olson's testimony before it had been misleading. Edsall's report appears to have caused the committee to delay a vote on Olson for a week.

Brock caused a minor stir in the summer of 1997 when he wrote an essay called "Confessions of a Right-Wing Hit Man" for Esquire. In it, he detailed his disillusion with the Right, which was unable to tolerate a journalist as single-mindedly devoted to truth as he. His opening anecdote concerned a phone call from Barbara Olson.

Mrs. Olson was calling to ask Brock not to come to a party at her place. He writes that she disinvited him because his just-released book on Hillary Clinton had not been as savage toward her as the Olsons, being Clinton-haters, had wanted. She says that the real reason she asked him not to come was that other guests had been sources for Brock's book and felt that he had burned them by revealing their identities; she didn't want any unpleasantness at the party. In Esquire, Brock wrote that "Barbara's message was especially jarring, given that Ted Olson. . . had a thriving First Amendment practice." (The First Amendment being the one that protects freedom of speech, freedom of religion, and the right to party.)

Edsall's piece doesn't mention this background. Nor does it mention that Brock has a book coming out on the vast conspiracy of right-wing Clinton-haters. He presents himself as having been one of the conspirators as a writer for the conservative magazine The American Spectator, although he is now repentant. The book is relevant because Brock's allegation is that Ted Olson misled the committee by downplaying his involvement in The American Spectator's investigations of President Clinton. Brock could well be trying to get some advance publicity for himself and his subject. Clinton's journalistic defenders, who have been obsessing about the Spectator for years, have also tried to discredit various Clinton critics for having axes to grind and books to sell. If that standard should apply to "Clinton-haters," it ought to apply to their haters, too.

The Spectator had a so-called "Arkansas Project" to look into Clinton's misdeeds as governor. Olson has said that he didn't know about the project until 1997, when he looked into it as a member of the magazine's board. Reporters affiliated with Salon, a liberal magazine, have suggested that the project was actually launched in Olson's law office and that he may have been paid for his work on the project.

What exactly counts as "work on the project" is, however, a matter of dispute. Brock says that Olson came to dinners with him and the magazine's editor, R. Emmett Tyrrell, to discuss possible stories on Clinton scandals. Even if Brock is telling the truth here-something one usually cannot assume-it is quite possible that Olson did not understand himself to be participating in some "project" by talking about Clinton scandals with Tyrrell. If discussing the scandals with Tyrrell counts as being part of the project, then for several years anyone who talked to Tyrrell at all was a participant. Every discussion your correspondents had with him during that time touched on the Clinton scandals. The man did write two books about the subject.

The Arkansas Project's records show $8,000 in payments to Olson's law firm Gibson, Dunn. But the project's finances-as its critics have explained-were shrouded in mystery and later had to be investigated by the board; Olson's claim not to have known whether the magazine was attributing its payments of him to the project is quite plausible. The payment was for research Olson did on possible criminal laws the president may have broken if all the allegations against him were true. The Spectator published an article-the magazine left the authors anonymous, but Olson was one of them-listing those laws. Olson didn't consider that work to be part of a gumshoe effort in Arkansas, and no reasonable person would. It is also quite plausible that Olson "did not know that there was a special source of funding" for this project, as Olson has written to the ranking Democrat on the judiciary committee.

On February 18, 1994, Gibson, Dunn sent a letter describing "the terms of our representation of The American Spectator" in this matter. Note that Gibson, Dunn was representing the Spectator, not the Arkansas Project; indeed, the words "Arkansas Project" do not appear in the letter. It states: "On behalf of The American Spectator, you have engaged us to prepare, on an expedited basis, a chart summarizing various Federal and State criminal laws that may be implicated by conduct of certain public officials as that conduct has been reported in the press. You have not asked us to do any independent factual research into that conduct or to reach any professional judgment concerning whether prosecutable offenses have in fact been committed." The letter is entirely consistent with Olson's testimony before the judiciary committee. The people making these tissue-thin accusations against Olson bring more discredit on themselves than on him.

THE OLSON PROJECT
[Smearing a nominee for fun and profit.]

Not that you'd know it from Thomas Edsall's reporting in the Washington Post, but David Brock has had a grievance against Ted and Barbara Olson for years. Ted Olson is up for confirmation as President Bush's solicitor general. Yesterday, Edsall reported that Brock told the Senate Judiciary Committee that Olson's testimony before it had been misleading. Edsall's report appears to have caused the committee to delay a vote on Olson for a week.

Brock caused a minor stir in the summer of 1997 when he wrote an essay called "Confessions of a Right-Wing Hit Man" for Esquire. In it, he detailed his disillusion with the Right, which was unable to tolerate a journalist as single-mindedly devoted to truth as he. His opening anecdote concerned a phone call from Barbara Olson.

Mrs. Olson was calling to ask Brock not to come to a party at her place. He writes that she disinvited him because his just-released book on Hillary Clinton had not been as savage toward her as the Olsons, being Clinton-haters, had wanted. She says that the real reason she asked him not to come was that other guests had been sources for Brock's book and felt that he had burned them by revealing their identities; she didn't want any unpleasantness at the party. In Esquire, Brock wrote that "Barbara's message was especially jarring, given that Ted Olson. . . had a thriving First Amendment practice." (The First Amendment being the one that protects freedom of speech, freedom of religion, and the right to party.)

Edsall's piece doesn't mention this background. Nor does it mention that Brock has a book coming out on the vast conspiracy of right-wing Clinton-haters. He presents himself as having been one of the conspirators as a writer for the conservative magazine The American Spectator, although he is now repentant. The book is relevant because Brock's allegation is that Ted Olson misled the committee by downplaying his involvement in The American Spectator's investigations of President Clinton. Brock could well be trying to get some advance publicity for himself and his subject. Clinton's journalistic defenders, who have been obsessing about the Spectator for years, have also tried to discredit various Clinton critics for having axes to grind and books to sell. If that standard should apply to "Clinton-haters," it ought to apply to their haters, too.

The Spectator had a so-called "Arkansas Project" to look into Clinton's misdeeds as governor. Olson has said that he didn't know about the project until 1997, when he looked into it as a member of the magazine's board. Reporters affiliated with Salon, a liberal magazine, have suggested that the project was actually launched in Olson's law office and that he may have been paid for his work on the project.

What exactly counts as "work on the project" is, however, a matter of dispute. Brock says that Olson came to dinners with him and the magazine's editor, R. Emmett Tyrrell, to discuss possible stories on Clinton scandals. Even if Brock is telling the truth here-something one usually cannot assume-it is quite possible that Olson did not understand himself to be participating in some "project" by talking about Clinton scandals with Tyrrell. If discussing the scandals with Tyrrell counts as being part of the project, then for several years anyone who talked to Tyrrell at all was a participant. Every discussion your correspondents had with him during that time touched on the Clinton scandals. The man did write two books about the subject.

The Arkansas Project's records show $8,000 in payments to Olson's law firm Gibson, Dunn. But the project's finances-as its critics have explained-were shrouded in mystery and later had to be investigated by the board; Olson's claim not to have known whether the magazine was attributing its payments of him to the project is quite plausible. The payment was for research Olson did on possible criminal laws the president may have broken if all the allegations against him were true. The Spectator published an article-the magazine left the authors anonymous, but Olson was one of them-listing those laws. Olson didn't consider that work to be part of a gumshoe effort in Arkansas, and no reasonable person would. It is also quite plausible that Olson "did not know that there was a special source of funding" for this project, as Olson has written to the ranking Democrat on the judiciary committee.

On February 18, 1994, Gibson, Dunn sent a letter describing "the terms of our representation of The American Spectator" in this matter. Note that Gibson, Dunn was representing the Spectator, not the Arkansas Project; indeed, the words "Arkansas Project" do not appear in the letter. It states: "On behalf of The American Spectator, you have engaged us to prepare, on an expedited basis, a chart summarizing various Federal and State criminal laws that may be implicated by conduct of certain public officials as that conduct has been reported in the press. You have not asked us to do any independent factual research into that conduct or to reach any professional judgment concerning whether prosecutable offenses have in fact been committed." The letter is entirely consistent with Olson's testimony before the judiciary committee. The people making these tissue-thin accusations against Olson bring more discredit on themselves than on him.

We would like to have 2 conference calls this week with the Vice President in order to discuss the energy plan. Can the RNC pay for this conference call? I ask b/c the WH capabilities are cumbersome (7 people per phone number, thus 8 phone numbers for a call of 50 people).

Thanks.

Expanding Free Trade With Africa

Presidential Action:

- Today President Bush will invite representatives from 35 African nations to Washington to attend the U.S./Sub-Saharan Africa Trade and Economic Cooperation Forum, a summit to discuss ways to stimulate trade between Africa and the United States and to increase the prosperity and quality of life in sub-Saharan Africa. The Forum will take place in October and will be hosted by the Secretaries of State, Treasury and Commerce, and the U.S. Trade Representative.

- Free trade benefits both America and Africa:

  - ✓ Free and open trade creates jobs for America's workers and farmers, lowers prices for consumers, and generates economic growth.

  - ✓ Free trade helps Africa by strengthening the spread of democracy, reducing poverty, generating new jobs, and spurring economic growth and expansion. Free-market reforms are already delivering real benefits to Africans in places like Mauritius, Madagascar and Mali. Democracy is emerging in countries like Nigeria and showing enduring strength in Ghana, Senegal, Botswana and South Africa.

Why is the President Taking This Action Now?

- President Bush wants to increase free trade with Africa because free trade improves the standard of living for Americans and Africans alike. The President wants to engage sub-Saharan African countries as valued economic partners.

- The President, in compliance with the African Growth and Opportunity Act, is announcing this forum with an agenda that will include important issues such as economic reforms and social issues of importance to Africa. The African Growth and Opportunity Act – enacted on May 18, 2000 -- is a bipartisan initiative designed to promote free trade and social and economic reform in Africa. The Act is helping to fuel economic growth in Africa, reducing poverty, and creating new jobs and new income.

- The President strongly supports this bipartisan initiative to promote prosperity and stability across Africa. The President wants to do everything he can to improve the quality of life for Africans and Americans alike.

Expanding Free Trade With Africa

Presidential Action:

- Today President Bush will invite representatives from 35 African nations to Washington to attend the U.S./Sub-Saharan Africa Trade and Economic Cooperation Forum, a summit to discuss ways to stimulate trade between Africa and the United States and to increase the prosperity and quality of life in sub-Saharan Africa. The Forum will take place in October and will be hosted by the Secretaries of State, Treasury and Commerce, and the U.S. Trade Representative.

- Free trade benefits both America and Africa:

  - ✓ Free and open trade creates jobs for America's workers and farmers, lowers prices for consumers, and generates economic growth.

  - ✓ Free trade helps Africa by strengthening the spread of democracy, reducing poverty, generating new jobs, and spurring economic growth and expansion. Free-market reforms are already delivering real benefits to Africans in places like Mauritius, Madagascar and Mali. Democracy is emerging in countries like Nigeria and showing enduring strength in Ghana, Senegal, Botswana and South Africa.

Why is the President Taking This Action Now?

- President Bush wants to increase free trade with Africa because free trade improves the standard of living for Americans and Africans alike. The President wants to engage sub-Saharan African countries as valued economic partners.

- The President, in compliance with the African Growth and Opportunity Act, is announcing this forum with an agenda that will include important issues such as economic reforms and social issues of importance to Africa. The African Growth and Opportunity Act – enacted on May 18, 2000 -- is a bipartisan initiative designed to promote free trade and social and economic reform in Africa. The Act is helping to fuel economic growth in Africa, reducing poverty, and creating new jobs and new income.

- The President strongly supports this bipartisan initiative to promote prosperity and stability across Africa. The President wants to do everything he can to improve the quality of life for Africans and Americans alike.

Expanding Free Trade With Africa

Presidential Action:

- Today President Bush will invite representatives from 35 African nations to Washington to attend the U.S./Sub-Saharan Africa Trade and Economic Cooperation Forum, a summit to discuss ways to stimulate trade between Africa and the United States and to increase the prosperity and quality of life in sub-Saharan Africa. The Forum will take place in October and will be hosted by the Secretaries of State, Treasury and Commerce, and the U.S. Trade Representative.

- Free trade benefits both America and Africa:

  - ✓ Free and open trade creates jobs for America's workers and farmers, lowers prices for consumers, and generates economic growth.

  - ✓ Free trade helps Africa by strengthening the spread of democracy, reducing poverty, generating new jobs, and spurring economic growth and expansion. Free-market reforms are already delivering real benefits to Africans in places like Mauritius, Madagascar and Mali. Democracy is emerging in countries like Nigeria and showing enduring strength in Ghana, Senegal, Botswana and South Africa.

Why is the President Taking This Action Now?

- President Bush wants to increase free trade with Africa because free trade improves the standard of living for Americans and Africans alike. The President wants to engage sub-Saharan African countries as valued economic partners.

- The President, in compliance with the African Growth and Opportunity Act, is announcing this forum with an agenda that will include important issues such as economic reforms and social issues of importance to Africa. The African Growth and Opportunity Act – enacted on May 18, 2000 -- is a bipartisan initiative designed to promote free trade and social and economic reform in Africa. The Act is helping to fuel economic growth in Africa, reducing poverty, and creating new jobs and new income.

- The President strongly supports this bipartisan initiative to promote prosperity and stability across Africa. The President wants to do everything he can to improve the quality of life for Africans and Americans alike.

Expanding Free Trade With Africa

Presidential Action:

- Today President Bush will invite representatives from 35 African nations to Washington to attend the U.S./Sub-Saharan Africa Trade and Economic Cooperation Forum, a summit to discuss ways to stimulate trade between Africa and the United States and to increase the prosperity and quality of life in sub-Saharan Africa. The Forum will take place in October and will be hosted by the Secretaries of State, Treasury and Commerce, and the U.S. Trade Representative.

- Free trade benefits both America and Africa:

  - ✓ Free and open trade creates jobs for America's workers and farmers, lowers prices for consumers, and generates economic growth.

  - ✓ Free trade helps Africa by strengthening the spread of democracy, reducing poverty, generating new jobs, and spurring economic growth and expansion. Free-market reforms are already delivering real benefits to Africans in places like Mauritius, Madagascar and Mali. Democracy is emerging in countries like Nigeria and showing enduring strength in Ghana, Senegal, Botswana and South Africa.

Why is the President Taking This Action Now?

- President Bush wants to increase free trade with Africa because free trade improves the standard of living for Americans and Africans alike. The President wants to engage sub-Saharan African countries as valued economic partners.

- The President, in compliance with the African Growth and Opportunity Act, is announcing this forum with an agenda that will include important issues such as economic reforms and social issues of importance to Africa. The African Growth and Opportunity Act – enacted on May 18, 2000 -- is a bipartisan initiative designed to promote free trade and social and economic reform in Africa. The Act is helping to fuel economic growth in Africa, reducing poverty, and creating new jobs and new income.

- The President strongly supports this bipartisan initiative to promote prosperity and stability across Africa. The President wants to do everything he can to improve the quality of life for Africans and Americans alike.

Energy For the 21st Century – The President's New Comprehensive Plan

- America has a serious energy shortage and President Bush has a comprehensive plan to address it.

- The President wants to protect consumers from wild fluctuations in energy prices by diversifying America's energy supply. America has become too dependent on foreign oil. The President wants to use 21st Century technology to lower consumer energy bills by producing a diversity of clean and affordable energy.

- The President is concerned about the Americans who are feeling the energy crunch. He is doing everything he can – as soon as he can -- to help Americans who are feeling the energy crunch at the gas pump and in their utility bills. The President is using every tool at his disposal to help those who are suffering from blackouts and high gas prices. He is helping California this summer by expediting new power plants and ordering federal agencies to conserve. The President is also earmarking federal energy revenues to help low-income families cope with high energy and gas bills.

- The President's plan to produce more reliable, affordable and environmentally clean energy is built on 3 core principles:

  - ✓ The plan is comprehensive and forward-looking.
  - ✓ It utilizes 21st Century technology to allow us to promote conservation and diversify our energy supply.
  - ✓ The plan will increase the quality of life of Americans by providing reliable energy and protecting the environment.

- The President's 170-page plan is comprehensive, containing 105 specific recommendations:
  - ✓ 42 of the recommendations will help modernize and increase conservation, protect our environment and help our communities.
  - ✓ 35 of the recommendations will help diversity our supply of clean, affordable energy and modernize our antiquated infrastructure.
  - ✓ 25 of the recommendations will help the US strengthen its global alliances and enhance national energy security.
  - ✓ 12 of the recommendations can be implemented by executive action or Executive Order.
  - ✓ 73 of the recommendations are directives to federal agencies.
  - ✓ 20 are recommendations for action by Congress.

- The President's leadership comes at a crucial time. Americans are hurting today, but tomorrow will be tougher if we don't unite around a comprehensive energy policy. Over the next 20 years US oil consumption will increase by 33% and demand for electricity will rise by 45%. Future energy demand is going to vastly outstrip our supply if no action is taken. The President wants to unify our nation around a comprehensive energy plan that protects consumers. The quicker we act on a comprehensive plan, the sooner we can provide relief to consumers.

- The President's plan harnesses the best of America's technology to help produce clean, dependable and affordable energy. America can't meet tomorrow's energy needs with yesterday's infrastructure. Just as the Internet has made our information more convenient, new technology can make our energy cleaner, cheaper and more efficient.

- The President's plan invests in exciting new energy technology that will help expand our economy, promote conservation and protect our environment at the same time.

- The President wants to sign comprehensive tax relief by Memorial Day to put money back in the pockets of consumers who need help paying their gas and utility bills.

The President's Comprehensive Energy Plan

- Modernize & Increase Conservation. Expand conservation by increasing funding for energy efficiency programs, encouraging the development of fuel-efficient vehicles, creating tax credits to encourage consumer conservation, and expanding DOE conservation programs.

- Modernize and Expand Our Energy Infrastructure. Outdated regulations have frozen America into an antiquated energy supply network designed for 1950 – not 2050. The President's plan will help create a new, high-tech energy delivery network by expediting permitting for infrastructure improvements, expanding research on reliable energy transmission, and tearing down regulatory barriers that hurt consumers by preventing them from having lower energy bills and more dependable energy.

- Diversify Energy Supplies. Deploy latest technologies to increase environmentally-friendly exploration and production of domestic energy resources to diversify our supply. The President's plan invests in new energy technology; expands the use of alternative and renewable energy such as wind, solar, biomass and geothermal energy; and provides for the safe expansion of nuclear energy.

- Improve & Accelerate Environmental Protection. New anti-pollution technologies now allow us to increase our energy production while protecting our environment. The President's strategy will cut harmful emissions from electric power plants and increase funding for clean coal research. An integrated approach can yield a cleaner environment, a stronger economy and a sufficient supply of energy for the future.

- Strengthen America's Energy Security. The President wants to protect Americans – especially low-income Americans -- from wild fluctuations in energy prices and supply by helping low-income families with heating and cooling assistance, reducing America's dependence on foreign oil and building strong relationships with energy producing nations in our own hemisphere.

Energy For the 21st Century – The President's New Comprehensive Plan

- America has a serious energy shortage and President Bush has a comprehensive plan to address it.

- The President wants to protect consumers from wild fluctuations in energy prices by diversifying America's energy supply. America has become too dependent on foreign oil. The President wants to use 21st Century technology to lower consumer energy bills by producing a diversity of clean and affordable energy.

- The President is concerned about the Americans who are feeling the energy crunch. He is doing everything he can – as soon as he can -- to help Americans who are feeling the energy crunch at the gas pump and in their utility bills. The President is using every tool at his disposal to help those who are suffering from blackouts and high gas prices. He is helping California this summer by expediting new power plants and ordering federal agencies to conserve. The President is also earmarking federal energy revenues to help low-income families cope with high energy and gas bills.

- The President's plan to produce more reliable, affordable and environmentally clean energy is built on 3 core principles:

  - ✓ The plan is comprehensive and forward-looking.
  - ✓ It utilizes 21st Century technology to allow us to promote conservation and diversify our energy supply.
  - ✓ The plan will increase the quality of life of Americans by providing reliable energy and protecting the environment.

- The President's 170-page plan is comprehensive, containing 105 specific recommendations:
  - ✓ 42 of the recommendations will help modernize and increase conservation, protect our environment and help our communities.
  - ✓ 35 of the recommendations will help diversity our supply of clean, affordable energy and modernize our antiquated infrastructure.
  - ✓ 25 of the recommendations will help the US strengthen its global alliances and enhance national energy security.
  - ✓ 12 of the recommendations can be implemented by executive action or Executive Order.
  - ✓ 73 of the recommendations are directives to federal agencies.
  - ✓ 20 are recommendations for action by Congress.

- The President's leadership comes at a crucial time. Americans are hurting today, but tomorrow will be tougher if we don't unite around a comprehensive energy policy. Over the next 20 years US oil consumption will increase by 33% and demand for electricity will rise by 45%. Future energy demand is going to vastly outstrip our supply if no action is taken. The President wants to unify our nation around a comprehensive energy plan that protects consumers. The quicker we act on a comprehensive plan, the sooner we can provide relief to consumers.

- The President's plan harnesses the best of America's technology to help produce clean, dependable and affordable energy. America can't meet tomorrow's energy needs with yesterday's infrastructure. Just as the Internet has made our information more convenient, new technology can make our energy cleaner, cheaper and more efficient.

- The President's plan invests in exciting new energy technology that will help expand our economy, promote conservation and protect our environment at the same time.

- The President wants to sign comprehensive tax relief by Memorial Day to put money back in the pockets of consumers who need help paying their gas and utility bills.

The President's Comprehensive Energy Plan

- Modernize & Increase Conservation. Expand conservation by increasing funding for energy efficiency programs, encouraging the development of fuel-efficient vehicles, creating tax credits to encourage consumer conservation, and expanding DOE conservation programs.

- Modernize and Expand Our Energy Infrastructure. Outdated regulations have frozen America into an antiquated energy supply network designed for 1950 – not 2050. The President's plan will help create a new, high-tech energy delivery network by expediting permitting for infrastructure improvements, expanding research on reliable energy transmission, and tearing down regulatory barriers that hurt consumers by preventing them from having lower energy bills and more dependable energy.

- Diversify Energy Supplies. Deploy latest technologies to increase environmentally-friendly exploration and production of domestic energy resources to diversify our supply. The President's plan invests in new energy technology; expands the use of alternative and renewable energy such as wind, solar, biomass and geothermal energy; and provides for the safe expansion of nuclear energy.

- Improve & Accelerate Environmental Protection. New anti-pollution technologies now allow us to increase our energy production while protecting our environment. The President's strategy will cut harmful emissions from electric power plants and increase funding for clean coal research. An integrated approach can yield a cleaner environment, a stronger economy and a sufficient supply of energy for the future.

- Strengthen America's Energy Security. The President wants to protect Americans – especially low-income Americans -- from wild fluctuations in energy prices and supply by helping low-income families with heating and cooling assistance, reducing America's dependence on foreign oil and building strong relationships with energy producing nations in our own hemisphere.

Energy For the 21st Century – The President's New Comprehensive Plan

- America has a serious energy shortage and President Bush has a comprehensive plan to address it.

- The President wants to protect consumers from wild fluctuations in energy prices by diversifying America's energy supply. America has become too dependent on foreign oil. The President wants to use 21st Century technology to lower consumer energy bills by producing a diversity of clean and affordable energy.

- The President is concerned about the Americans who are feeling the energy crunch. He is doing everything he can – as soon as he can -- to help Americans who are feeling the energy crunch at the gas pump and in their utility bills. The President is using every tool at his disposal to help those who are suffering from blackouts and high gas prices. He is helping California this summer by expediting new power plants and ordering federal agencies to conserve. The President is also earmarking federal energy revenues to help low-income families cope with high energy and gas bills.

- The President's plan to produce more reliable, affordable and environmentally clean energy is built on 3 core principles:

  - ✓ The plan is comprehensive and forward-looking.
  - ✓ It utilizes 21st Century technology to allow us to promote conservation and diversify our energy supply.
  - ✓ The plan will increase the quality of life of Americans by providing reliable energy and protecting the environment.

- The President's 170-page plan is comprehensive, containing 105 specific recommendations:
  - ✓ 42 of the recommendations will help modernize and increase conservation, protect our environment and help our communities.
  - ✓ 35 of the recommendations will help diversity our supply of clean, affordable energy and modernize our antiquated infrastructure.
  - ✓ 25 of the recommendations will help the US strengthen its global alliances and enhance national energy security.
  - ✓ 12 of the recommendations can be implemented by executive action or Executive Order.
  - ✓ 73 of the recommendations are directives to federal agencies.
  - ✓ 20 are recommendations for action by Congress.

- The President's leadership comes at a crucial time. Americans are hurting today, but tomorrow will be tougher if we don't unite around a comprehensive energy policy. Over the next 20 years US oil consumption will increase by 33% and demand for electricity will rise by 45%. Future energy demand is going to vastly outstrip our supply if no action is taken. The President wants to unify our nation around a comprehensive energy plan that protects consumers. The quicker we act on a comprehensive plan, the sooner we can provide relief to consumers.

- The President's plan harnesses the best of America's technology to help produce clean, dependable and affordable energy. America can't meet tomorrow's energy needs with yesterday's infrastructure. Just as the Internet has made our information more convenient, new technology can make our energy cleaner, cheaper and more efficient.

- The President's plan invests in exciting new energy technology that will help expand our economy, promote conservation and protect our environment at the same time.

- The President wants to sign comprehensive tax relief by Memorial Day to put money back in the pockets of consumers who need help paying their gas and utility bills.

The President's Comprehensive Energy Plan

- Modernize & Increase Conservation. Expand conservation by increasing funding for energy efficiency programs, encouraging the development of fuel-efficient vehicles, creating tax credits to encourage consumer conservation, and expanding DOE conservation programs.

- Modernize and Expand Our Energy Infrastructure. Outdated regulations have frozen America into an antiquated energy supply network designed for 1950 – not 2050. The President's plan will help create a new, high-tech energy delivery network by expediting permitting for infrastructure improvements, expanding research on reliable energy transmission, and tearing down regulatory barriers that hurt consumers by preventing them from having lower energy bills and more dependable energy.

- Diversify Energy Supplies. Deploy latest technologies to increase environmentally-friendly exploration and production of domestic energy resources to diversify our supply. The President's plan invests in new energy technology; expands the use of alternative and renewable energy such as wind, solar, biomass and geothermal energy; and provides for the safe expansion of nuclear energy.

- Improve & Accelerate Environmental Protection. New anti-pollution technologies now allow us to increase our energy production while protecting our environment. The President's strategy will cut harmful emissions from electric power plants and increase funding for clean coal research. An integrated approach can yield a cleaner environment, a stronger economy and a sufficient supply of energy for the future.

- Strengthen America's Energy Security. The President wants to protect Americans – especially low-income Americans -- from wild fluctuations in energy prices and supply by helping low-income families with heating and cooling assistance, reducing America's dependence on foreign oil and building strong relationships with energy producing nations in our own hemisphere.

Energy For the 21st Century – The President's New Comprehensive Plan

- America has a serious energy shortage and President Bush has a comprehensive plan to address it.

- The President wants to protect consumers from wild fluctuations in energy prices by diversifying America's energy supply. America has become too dependent on foreign oil. The President wants to use 21st Century technology to lower consumer energy bills by producing a diversity of clean and affordable energy.

- The President is concerned about the Americans who are feeling the energy crunch. He is doing everything he can – as soon as he can -- to help Americans who are feeling the energy crunch at the gas pump and in their utility bills. The President is using every tool at his disposal to help those who are suffering from blackouts and high gas prices. He is helping California this summer by expediting new power plants and ordering federal agencies to conserve. The President is also earmarking federal energy revenues to help low-income families cope with high energy and gas bills.

- The President's plan to produce more reliable, affordable and environmentally clean energy is built on 3 core principles:

  - ✓ The plan is comprehensive and forward-looking.
  - ✓ It utilizes 21st Century technology to allow us to promote conservation and diversify our energy supply.
  - ✓ The plan will increase the quality of life of Americans by providing reliable energy and protecting the environment.

- The President's 170-page plan is comprehensive, containing 105 specific recommendations:
  - ✓ 42 of the recommendations will help modernize and increase conservation, protect our environment and help our communities.
  - ✓ 35 of the recommendations will help diversity our supply of clean, affordable energy and modernize our antiquated infrastructure.
  - ✓ 25 of the recommendations will help the US strengthen its global alliances and enhance national energy security.
  - ✓ 12 of the recommendations can be implemented by executive action or Executive Order.
  - ✓ 73 of the recommendations are directives to federal agencies.
  - ✓ 20 are recommendations for action by Congress.

- The President's leadership comes at a crucial time. Americans are hurting today, but tomorrow will be tougher if we don't unite around a comprehensive energy policy. Over the next 20 years US oil consumption will increase by 33% and demand for electricity will rise by 45%. Future energy demand is going to vastly outstrip our supply if no action is taken. The President wants to unify our nation around a comprehensive energy plan that protects consumers. The quicker we act on a comprehensive plan, the sooner we can provide relief to consumers.

- The President's plan harnesses the best of America's technology to help produce clean, dependable and affordable energy. America can't meet tomorrow's energy needs with yesterday's infrastructure. Just as the Internet has made our information more convenient, new technology can make our energy cleaner, cheaper and more efficient.

- The President's plan invests in exciting new energy technology that will help expand our economy, promote conservation and protect our environment at the same time.

- The President wants to sign comprehensive tax relief by Memorial Day to put money back in the pockets of consumers who need help paying their gas and utility bills.

The President's Comprehensive Energy Plan

- Modernize & Increase Conservation. Expand conservation by increasing funding for energy efficiency programs, encouraging the development of fuel-efficient vehicles, creating tax credits to encourage consumer conservation, and expanding DOE conservation programs.

- Modernize and Expand Our Energy Infrastructure. Outdated regulations have frozen America into an antiquated energy supply network designed for 1950 – not 2050. The President's plan will help create a new, high-tech energy delivery network by expediting permitting for infrastructure improvements, expanding research on reliable energy transmission, and tearing down regulatory barriers that hurt consumers by preventing them from having lower energy bills and more dependable energy.

- Diversify Energy Supplies. Deploy latest technologies to increase environmentally-friendly exploration and production of domestic energy resources to diversify our supply. The President's plan invests in new energy technology; expands the use of alternative and renewable energy such as wind, solar, biomass and geothermal energy; and provides for the safe expansion of nuclear energy.

- Improve & Accelerate Environmental Protection. New anti-pollution technologies now allow us to increase our energy production while protecting our environment. The President's strategy will cut harmful emissions from electric power plants and increase funding for clean coal research. An integrated approach can yield a cleaner environment, a stronger economy and a sufficient supply of energy for the future.

- Strengthen America's Energy Security. The President wants to protect Americans – especially low-income Americans -- from wild fluctuations in energy prices and supply by helping low-income families with heating and cooling assistance, reducing America's dependence on foreign oil and building strong relationships with energy producing nations in our own hemisphere.

Energy For the 21st Century – The President's New Comprehensive Plan

- America has a serious energy shortage and President Bush has a comprehensive plan to address it.

- The President wants to protect consumers from wild fluctuations in energy prices by diversifying America's energy supply. America has become too dependent on foreign oil. The President wants to use 21st Century technology to lower consumer energy bills by producing a diversity of clean and affordable energy.

- The President is concerned about the Americans who are feeling the energy crunch. He is doing everything he can – as soon as he can -- to help Americans who are feeling the energy crunch at the gas pump and in their utility bills. The President is using every tool at his disposal to help those who are suffering from blackouts and high gas prices. He is helping California this summer by expediting new power plants and ordering federal agencies to conserve. The President is also earmarking federal energy revenues to help low-income families cope with high energy and gas bills.

- The President's plan to produce more reliable, affordable and environmentally clean energy is built on 3 core principles:

  - ✓ The plan is comprehensive and forward-looking.
  - ✓ It utilizes 21st Century technology to allow us to promote conservation and diversify our energy supply.
  - ✓ The plan will increase the quality of life of Americans by providing reliable energy and protecting the environment.

- The President's 170-page plan is comprehensive, containing 105 specific recommendations:
  - ✓ 42 of the recommendations will help modernize and increase conservation, protect our environment and help our communities.
  - ✓ 35 of the recommendations will help diversity our supply of clean, affordable energy and modernize our antiquated infrastructure.
  - ✓ 25 of the recommendations will help the US strengthen its global alliances and enhance national energy security.
  - ✓ 12 of the recommendations can be implemented by executive action or Executive Order.
  - ✓ 73 of the recommendations are directives to federal agencies.
  - ✓ 20 are recommendations for action by Congress.

- The President's leadership comes at a crucial time. Americans are hurting today, but tomorrow will be tougher if we don't unite around a comprehensive energy policy. Over the next 20 years US oil consumption will increase by 33% and demand for electricity will rise by 45%. Future energy demand is going to vastly outstrip our supply if no action is taken. The President wants to unify our nation around a comprehensive energy plan that protects consumers. The quicker we act on a comprehensive plan, the sooner we can provide relief to consumers.

- The President's plan harnesses the best of America's technology to help produce clean, dependable and affordable energy. America can't meet tomorrow's energy needs with yesterday's infrastructure. Just as the Internet has made our information more convenient, new technology can make our energy cleaner, cheaper and more efficient.

- The President's plan invests in exciting new energy technology that will help expand our economy, promote conservation and protect our environment at the same time.

- The President wants to sign comprehensive tax relief by Memorial Day to put money back in the pockets of consumers who need help paying their gas and utility bills.

The President's Comprehensive Energy Plan

- Modernize & Increase Conservation. Expand conservation by increasing funding for energy efficiency programs, encouraging the development of fuel-efficient vehicles, creating tax credits to encourage consumer conservation, and expanding DOE conservation programs.

- Modernize and Expand Our Energy Infrastructure. Outdated regulations have frozen America into an antiquated energy supply network designed for 1950 – not 2050. The President's plan will help create a new, high-tech energy delivery network by expediting permitting for infrastructure improvements, expanding research on reliable energy transmission, and tearing down regulatory barriers that hurt consumers by preventing them from having lower energy bills and more dependable energy.

- Diversify Energy Supplies. Deploy latest technologies to increase environmentally-friendly exploration and production of domestic energy resources to diversify our supply. The President's plan invests in new energy technology; expands the use of alternative and renewable energy such as wind, solar, biomass and geothermal energy; and provides for the safe expansion of nuclear energy.

- Improve & Accelerate Environmental Protection. New anti-pollution technologies now allow us to increase our energy production while protecting our environment. The President's strategy will cut harmful emissions from electric power plants and increase funding for clean coal research. An integrated approach can yield a cleaner environment, a stronger economy and a sufficient supply of energy for the future.

- Strengthen America's Energy Security. The President wants to protect Americans – especially low-income Americans -- from wild fluctuations in energy prices and supply by helping low-income families with heating and cooling assistance, reducing America's dependence on foreign oil and building strong relationships with energy producing nations in our own hemisphere.

S. 896 – Restoring Earnings to Lift Individuals and Empower Families (RELIEF) Act of 2001
(Sen. Grassley (R) Iowa)

The Administration supports Senate passage of S. 896 as another positive step on the way to bringing much needed tax relief to the American people. The Administration commends the authors of the RELIEF Act for their leadership.

The bill begins to lay a foundation for further long-term economic growth, through the inclusion of four key elements of the President's Tax Cut Plan: reducing current income tax rates, including a new low 10 percent rate; eliminating the death tax; increasing the child tax credit from $500 to $1,000 per child and applying the credit to the Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT); and reducing the marriage penalty. The bill also begins the process of providing much needed immediate tax relief.

However, the Administration believes more tax relief is needed for small business owners and entrepreneurs - the engines of growth in the Nation's economy - who pay the top rates. Moreover, to increase incentives for investment and encourage economic growth, the Administration believes the reductions in the marginal tax rates should be phased in more quickly.

The Administration remains committed to the core principles of providing income tax relief to Americans, reducing the tax penalty on work, saving, and investment, and putting money back into the pockets of American consumers as quickly as possible. The Administration will work together with the Congress as the legislative process continues to achieve a final result that best embodies the priorities and objectives of the President's plan.

Pay-As-You-Go Scoring

Any law that would reduce receipts is subject to the pay-as-you-go requirements of the Balanced Budget and Emergency Deficit Control Act. Accordingly, S. 896 or any substitute amendment in lieu thereof, that would also reduce revenues, will be subject to the pay-as-you-go requirement. The Administration will work with the Congress to ensure that any unintended sequester of spending does not occur under current law or the enactment of any other proposals that meet the President's objectives to reduce the debt, fund priority initiatives, and grant tax relief to all income tax paying Americans.

SUMMARY OF S. 896

S. 896 would reduce current income tax rates, reduce the marriage penalty, increase the child tax credit, eliminate the estate tax, and provide a number of changes to other current tax laws, including education and pension provisions.

TAX RATES

S. 896 would create a new initial tax rate bracket beginning in calendar year 2001 and phase in reductions to the four highest income tax rates over six years.

New Low Income Tax Rate Bracket. The bill would create a new 10 percent income tax bracket for a portion of taxable income that is currently taxed at 15 percent. The new initial bracket would cover taxable income up to $6,000 for single individuals, up to $10,000 for heads of households, and up to $12,000 for married couples filing joint returns. The lower rate would be effective for taxable years beginning in calendar year 2001.

The taxable income levels for the new low-rate bracket would be adjusted annually for inflation for taxable years beginning after December 31, 2006.

The current 15-percent income tax bracket would be adjusted to start at the end of the new low-rate income tax bracket. The 15-percent income tax bracket would end at the same level as under current law. (Joint Committee on Taxation estimated revenue effect for FY 2001: -$9.4 billion; FY 2002: -$ 59.2 billion; FYs 2001-2006: -$229.5 billion; FYs 2001-2011: -$438.7 billion.)

Reduction of Other Tax Rates. Beginning in calendar year 2002, S. 896 would begin to phase in reductions to the four highest income tax rates. The bill would phase down the current four income tax rates of 39.6 percent, 36 percent, 31 percent, and 28 percent to 36 percent, 33 percent, 28 percent, and 25 percent, respectively, over six years. The table below shows the schedule for the income tax rate reductions.

For taxable years beginning during calendar years:	The corresponding percentages would be substituted for the following percentages:
	28%	31%	36%	39.6%
2002 - 2004	27%	30%	35%	38.6%
2005 - 2006	26%	29%	34%	37.6%
2007 and thereafter	25%	28%	33%	36%

The bill would require the Treasury to make appropriate revisions to the wage withholding tables to reflect the proposed rate reduction for calendar year 2001 as expeditiously as possible. (Joint Committee on Taxation estimated revenue effect for FY 2002: -$11.7 billion; FYs 2002-2006: -$112.6 billion; FYs 2002-2011: -$397.3 billion.)

MARRIAGE PENALTY RELIEF

S. 896 would increase, for married couples filing joint tax returns: (1) the basic standard deductions; (2) the size of the 15 percent income tax bracket; and (3) the earned income amount used to calculate the earned income credit.

Increase in Standard Deduction for Married Couples. Under current law, for taxable years beginning in 2001, the basic standard deduction amount for married couples filing joint returns is 168 percent of the basic standard deduction amount for single filers. Under the bill, the basic standard deduction for a married couple filing a joint return would be 200 percent of the basic standard deduction for an unmarried individual filing a single return. Under current law, the basic standard deduction amount for a married taxpayer filing a separate return is 84 percent of the basic standard deduction amount for single filers. Under the bill, the basic standard deduction for a married taxpayer filing separately would be equal to the basic standard deduction for an unmarried individual filing a single return. These increases would be phased-in over five years beginning in 2006 and would be fully phased-in for 2010 and thereafter. (Joint Committee on Taxation estimated revenue effect for FY 2002: $0; FYs 2002-2006: -$0.8 billion; FYs 2002-2011: -$12.8 billion.)

Expansion of the 15-percent Rate Bracket for Married Couples Filing Joint Returns. Under current law, for taxable years beginning in 2001, the size of the 15 percent regular income tax rate bracket for a married couple filing a joint return is 167 percent the size of the 15 percent bracket for an unmarried individual filing a single return. S. 896 would increase the size of the 15 percent regular income tax rate bracket for a married couple filing a joint return to twice the size of the 15 percent bracket for an unmarried individual filing a single return. This increase would be phased in as shown in the table below.

For taxable years beginning in calendar years:	The size of the 15 percent rate bracket for a married couple filing a joint return as a percentage of the rate bracket for unmarried individuals would be:
2006	174%

2007	180%
2008	187%
2009	193%
2010 and thereafter	200%

(Joint Committee on Taxation estimated revenue effect for FY 2002: $0; FYs 2002-2006: -$2.3 billion; FYs 2002-2011: -$24.6 billion.)

Earned Income Credit (EIC) Modification and Simplification. For married couples filing joint returns, S. 896 would increase the beginning and ending income levels of the earned income credit phase-out by $3,000. The bill would simplify the definition of earned income by excluding non-taxable earned income amounts from the definition of earned income for EIC purposes. The bill would also simplify the calculation of the EIC by replacing modified gross income with adjusted gross income. The bill would repeal the provision in current law that reduces the EIC by the amount of an individual's alternative minimum tax These provisions of the bill would be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 2001. (Joint Committee on Taxation estimated revenue effect for FY 2002: loss of less than $50 million; FYs 2002-2006: -$12.9 billion; FYs 2002-2011: -$59.8 billion.)

CHILD TAX CREDIT

S. 896 would increase the child tax credit from $500 to $1,000 for each qualifying child.

Increase and Expansion of the Child Tax Credit. The bill would increase the child tax credit from $500 to $1,000 for each qualifying child under the age of 17. The increase would be phased in over eleven years as shown in the table below:

For taxable years beginning in calendar years:	The credit amount per child would be:
2001- 2003	$600
2004-2006	$700
2007-2009	$800
2010	$900
2011 and thereafter	$1,000

The bill would make this child credit refundable for up to 15 percent of the taxpayer's earned income in excess of $10,000. Consequently, in 2001, families having earned income of at least $14,000 and one child would get a refundable credit of $600. Families with three or more children would be permitted to use the present-law refundable child credit or the proposed refundable child credit.

S. 896 would also allow the child credit to be claimed against the alternative minimum tax (AMT) permanently and would repeal the AMT offset of refundable credits. This provision of the bill would be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 2000. (Joint Committee on Taxation estimated revenue effect for FY 2001: -$0.6 billion; FY 2002: -$10.4 billion; FYs 2001-2006: -$70.3 billion; FYs 2001-2011: -$190.4 billion.)

ESTATE TAX

S. 896 would provide for phased reductions of current estate, gift, and generation-skipping transfer taxes over ten years and repeal these taxes for estates of decedents dying and for generation-skipping transfers made after December 31, 2010.

Estate and Gift Taxes. Under current law, an estate tax is imposed on transfers of assets of a taxpayer at death, and a gift tax is imposed on transfers of assets during a taxpayer's lifetime. The estate and gift taxes are unified such that a single graduated rate schedule applies to cumulative taxable transfers made by a taxpayer during his or her lifetime and at death. The current rate schedule ranges from 18 percent on the first $10,000 in cumulative taxable transfers to 55 percent on transfers over $3 million. Current law provides, through a tax credit called the "unified credit," for the elimination of taxes on taxable gifts and taxable estates on a total of $675,000 for gifts made, and for estates of decedents dying, after 1999. This total, called the "applicable exclusion amount," increases to $700,000 in 2002 and 2003, $850,000 in 2004, $950,000 in 2005, and $1,000,000 in 2006 and subsequent years.

The bill would provide for phased reductions, over ten years, of current estate and gift taxes and repeal the estate tax for estates of decedents dying after December 31, 2010. S. 896 would reduce the top tax rate on estates and gifts from 55 percent to 50 percent in 2002. From 2003 through 2007, the top tax rate would be further reduced by one percentage point per year, until it reaches 45 percent. In 2011, when the estate tax would be repealed, the top gift tax would be reduced to 40 percent and would remain at that level thereafter.

S. 896 would increase "the applicable exclusion amount" as shown in the table below.

Calendar Years	"Applicable Exclusion Amount"
2002 - 2003	$1 million
2004	$2 million
2005 - 2007	$3 million
2008 - 2009	$3.5 million
2010	$4 million
2011	N/A (taxes repealed)

(Joint Committee on Taxation estimated revenue effect (for this section on "Estate and Gift Taxes" and the section below on "Basis of Property after death") for FY 2002: $0; FYs 2002-2006: -$40 billion; FYs 2001-2011: -$144.2 billion.)

Generation-Skipping Transfer Taxes. A generation-skipping transfer (GST) tax generally is imposed on transfers, either directly or through a trust, to a "skip person" (i.e., a beneficiary in a generation more than one generation below that of the transferor). An exemption of $1 million (indexed for inflation beginning in 1999) is provided for each person making GSTs. For transfers made through 1998, the GST exemption was $1 million. For transfers made in 1999, the exemption was $1,010,000. If the value of transferred property exceeds the amount of GST exemption allocated to that property, then the GST tax generally is imposed at a flat rate equal to the highest estate tax rate (currently 55 percent) on the value of the taxable property at the time of a taxable event.

S. 896 would make several relatively technical amendments to the GST tax before repealing the GST tax in 2011. These amendments generally would: (1) provide for a lower asset valuation than under current law, when allocating an asset to the GST exemption, through certain automatic and retroactive allocations; and (2) allow for assets to be allocated to the GST exemption, that otherwise would not be allocated, through provisions for taxpayer relief for errors in GST allocation. This provision of the bill would apply to transfers subject to estate or gift tax made after December 31, 2000, and to estate tax inclusion periods ending after December 31, 2000. (Joint Committee on Taxation estimated revenue effect for FY 2002: -$2 million; FYs 2002-2006: -$39 million; FYs 2002-2011: -$89 million.)

Basis of Property at Death. The "basis" value of property is the value for tax purposes of an individual's investment in a property. The basis is used for tax purposes to compute gains or losses on the sale or exchange of property. Under current law, the basis of property received from a decedent is its fair market value on the date of the decedent's death. This "step up" (or "step down") in basis eliminates the recognition of any income on the appreciation of property that occurred prior to the decedent's death. Under the bill, after repeal of the estate and GST taxes, the basis of assets received from a decedent generally would be the basis as it would have been in the hands of the decedent or the last preceding owner by whom it was not acquired by gift. For specified amounts, however, the beneficiary would receive a "step up" in basis, i.e., the basis would be the fair market value for up to $1.3 million of assets left to any beneficiary and an additional $3 million of assets left to a surviving spouse, thus allowing such individuals to inherit these amounts without paying accumulated capital gains taxes. The bill would provide for annual cost-of-living adjustments to these totals after December 31, 2010.

Conservation Easements. Under current law, an executor may elect to exclude from the taxable estate 40 percent of the value of any land subject to a "qualified conservation easement," i.e., a contribution of a qualified real property interest to a qualified organization exclusively for conservation purposes. S. 896 would expand the availability of qualified conservation easements to any property within the United States that otherwise meets the requirements of a conservation easement by repealing the distance requirements for qualified conservation easement. The bill would also clarify that the date for determining easement compliance would be the date on which the donation was made. This provision of the bill would be effective for estates of decedents dying after December 31, 2000. (Joint Committee on Taxation estimated revenue effect for FY 2002: -$3 million; FYs 2002-2006: -$109 million; FYs 2002-2011: -$292 million.)

ALTERNATIVE MINIMUM TAX

S. 896 would increase the alternative minimum tax exemption amount for married and unmarried individuals.

Individual Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT) Relief. Under current law, an alternative minimum tax is imposed on individuals to the extent that the tentative minimum tax exceeds the regular tax. The tentative minimum tax generally is an amount equal to the sum of (1) 26 percent of the first $175,000 (or the first $87,500 in the case of a married individual filing a separate return) of alternative minimum taxable income in excess of an exemption amount and (2) 28 percent of the remaining alternative minimum taxable income. Alternative minimum taxable income is the individual's taxable income adjusted to take account of specified preferences and adjustments. The AMT exemption amounts are: (1) $45,000 in the case of married individuals filing a joint return and surviving spouses; (2) $33,750 in the case of other unmarried individuals; and (3) $22,500 in the case of married individuals filing a separate return, estates, and trusts.

The bill would increase the alternative minimum tax exemption amount for married couples filing a joint return and surviving spouses by $4,000 in 2001 through 2006. The alternative minimum tax exemption amounts for other individuals (i.e., unmarried individuals and married individuals filing a separate return) would increase by $2,000 in 2001 through 2006. This provision of the bill would be effective for taxable years beginning after December 31, 2000, and before January 1, 2007. (Joint Committee on Taxation estimated revenue effect for FY 2001: -$0.2 billion; FY 2002: -$2.2 billion; FYs 2001-2006: -$27 billion; FYs 2001-2011: -$33.1 billion.)

EDUCATION-RELATED TAX PROVISIONS

S. 896 would make changes to current laws allowing contributions to funds for certain future education expenses of named beneficiaries and other tax laws related to education.

Deduction for Qualified Higher Education Expenses. The bill would allow deductions of up to $3,000 annually for higher-education expenses paid by individuals with taxable income up to $65,000 or couples with incomes up to $130,000 in 2002 and 2003, and in 2004 and 2005, allow deductions of up to $5,000 for these same taxpayers and up to $2,000 for individuals with taxable income no greater than $80,000 or $160,000 for joint filers.

Exclusion for Employer-Provided Education Assistance. S. 896 would provide for a permanent extension of the tax-free treatment of employer-provided education assistance for undergraduate and graduate level courses beginning after December 31, 2001.

Education IRAs. Education IRAs (Ed IRAs), which were created by the "Taxpayer Relief Act of 1997," are trusts or custodial accounts created exclusively to pay higher education expenses (i.e., tuition, fees, books) of a named beneficiary. Contributions to Ed IRAs are not tax deductible but earnings on the account generally are not taxed until they are distributed to the beneficiary. Contributions into those accounts can be made by any person or corporation, but the contribution amount is phased out for higher income taxpayers, and is capped at $500 annually per beneficiary until the beneficiary reaches age 18. S. 896 would modify Ed IRAs by: increasing the limit on annual contributions to Ed IRAs for a beneficiary from $500 to $2,000; allowing Ed IRA contributions for a "special needs beneficiary" (as defined by Treasury Department regulations) above the age of 18; clarifying that corporations, tax-exempt organizations, and other entities may contribute to Ed IRAs, regardless of income; allowing contributions until April 15th of the following year, with the contribution counting towards the preceding taxable year; allowing taxpayers to exclude Ed IRA distributions from gross income and claim the HOPE or Lifetime Learning credit as long as they are not used for the same expenses; repealing the excise tax on contributions made to Ed IRAs when the contributions are made by anyone on behalf of the same beneficiary to a qualified State tuition program; modifying the phase-out range for married taxpayers to $190,000-$220,000 so it is twice the range for single taxpayers; and permitting tax-free withdrawals from Ed IRAs to be used for qualified expenses at a public, private, or religious elementary school (with "school" defined by State law).

Modifications to Student Loan Interest Deduction. The bill would eliminate the 60-month limit on the deductibility of interest paid on qualified student loans and increase the phase-out range for those deductions to from $40,000-$55,000 for singles to $50,000-$60,000 and from $60,000-$75,000 for joint filers to $100,000-$130,000 for interest paid on loans after December 31, 2001.

Qualified Prepaid Tuition/Savings Programs. Qualified State tuition programs allow individuals to purchase tuition credits for a named beneficiary or make contributions to a savings account plan for a beneficiary to cover higher education expenses. S. 896 would modify prepaid qualified tuition and savings programs to: allow tax-free distributions from State plans, allow tax-free distributions for actual living expenses, and allow private institutions to offer prepaid tuition plans, tax-deferred in tax years beginning after December 31, 2001, with tax-free distributions in tax years beginning after December 31, 2003; allow a taxpayer to exclude qualified State tuition program distributions from gross income and claim the HOPE or Lifetime Learning credits as long as they are not used for the same expenses; and expand the definition of family member to include cousins for purposes of tax-free rollovers and other benefits under the programs.

Other Education-Related Provisions. The bill would eliminate the tax on awards under the National Health Corps Scholarship program and F. Edward Hebert Armed Forces

Health Professions Scholarship program. The bill would also improve local options for the construction and renovation of public schools by increasing, from $10 million to $15 million, the amount of bonds "small governmental units" may issue to finance qualified school construction before being subject to the arbitrage rebate requirement and by allowing the issuance of tax-exempt private activity bonds for privately owned public education facilities subject to annual State caps equal to the greater of $10 per resident or $5 million.

These provisions would be effective for tax years beginning after December 31, 2001, unless otherwise noted above. (JCT estimated revenue effect for FY 2002: -$2.5 billion; FYs 2002-2006: -$18.7 billion; FYs 2002-2011: -$32.8 billion.)

RETIREMENT SAVINGS AND PENSION COVERAGE

The bill would make numerous changes to pension and retirement savings laws. For example, S. 896 would modify individual retirement account (IRA) contribution limits by: (1) increasing the maximum annual dollar amount contribution limit for IRA contributions from $2,000 to $2,500 in 2002 through 2005, $3,000 in 2006 and 2007, $3,500 in 2008 and 2009, $4,000 in 2010, $5,000 in 2011, and indexed for inflation thereafter; (2) expanding the increase of the IRA maximum contribution limit for individuals who have attained age 50 before the end of the taxable year by providing for a $500 "catch-up" in 2002 through 2005, $1,000 in 2006 through 2009, $1,500 in 2010 and $2,000 in 2011 and thereafter; and (3) allowing tax-free withdrawals from IRA's for charitable purposes.

In addition, the bill would change the employer pension system by: (1) increasing contribution limits to qualified cash or deferred arrangements (section 401(k) plans), tax-sheltered annuities (section 403(b) annuities), and certain deferred compensation plans (section 457 eligible plans) up to $15,000 in 2010 and allowing employees over age 50 to make additional annual contributions to those plans and annuities; (2) increasing other contribution, benefit and deduction limits under the qualified plan rules; (3) eliminating certain rules regarding nondiscrimination and rules applying to top-heavy plans (defined benefit plans where 60 percent of the cumulative accrued benefits are for key employees); and (4) providing small businesses a non-refundable tax credit for a portion of the cost of the contributions and administrative expenses of establishing a new plan.

S. 896 also provides a temporary non-refundable tax credit for low and middle income individuals who save in IRAs or qualified plans, requires faster vesting for employer matching contributions, and affords greater portability among IRAs and the different types of employer plans.

(JCT estimated revenue effect for FY 2002: -$1.5 billion; FYs 2002-2006: -$16.0 billion; FYs 2002-2011: -$40.1 billion.)

SUNSET PROVISIONS

The provisions of S. 896 would sunset as follows. The individual income tax rate reductions, the provisions relating to the child tax credit, the marriage penalty relief provisions, and the education provisions would have no effect for taxable years beginning after September 30, 2011. The estate, gift, and generation-skipping tax provisions would have no effect for decedents dying and gifts made after September 30, 2011. The pension and individual retirement arrangement provisions would have no effect for years beginning after September 30, 2011.

PAY-AS-YOU-GO SCORING

S. 896 could affect receipts; therefore, it would be subject to the pay-as-you-go requirements of the Omnibus Reconciliation Act of 1990. The Joint Committee on Taxation estimates that S. 896 would have a net budget cost of $10.1 billion in FY 2001, $87.5 billion in FY 2002, $523.1 billion over six years, FY 2001-2006, and $1.4 trillion over 11 years, FY 2001-2011. Estimates by the Department of the Treasury are not available.
